OUR BIRTH IS BUT A SLEEP AND A BEGINNING:
THE SOUL THAT RISETH IN US, OUR LIFE'S STAR,
HATH HAD ELSEWHERE ITS SETTING, AND COMETH FROM AFAR:
NOT IN ENTIRE FORGETFULNESS
AND NOT IN UTTER NAKEDNESS,
BUT TRAILING CLOUDS OF GLORY DO WE COME FROM GOD WHO IS OUR HOME.

"Family Album"

In collecting the assortment of pictures for this "Family Album," the objective was to get the oldest and most representative group possible so they would have a wide and general appeal to all family branches. Also, for a better and more interesting comparison by the young people who read this story, every effort was made to find pictures of our forefathers taken when they too were young.

But the result was not altogether successful for several reasons. Changes in modes of living have caused many of the old family possessions including family albums with faces long forgotten, to be thrown out as "junk" along with the pewter dishes, steel tableware, candle dips and kerosene lamps with glass tassels.

Then too, many family heirlooms have been divided and scattered by marriage; so at the end of two or three generations the pictures became lost. Homes have burned now and then, taking with them all the old "attic keepsakes." Very often the failure to record the names and relationship on the pictures, have caused them to be discarded as valueless.

Therefore the pictures herein may savor too much of some branches of the allied families though having general historic interest. Some of the pictures are from the earliest forms of commercial photography—ambrotype, ferrotype or tintype and daguerreotype. But in this grouping they lose the flavor of the ornate, clasped cases in which they are mounted, with red plush inside the covers, stamped brass ornamental frames, gilt edgings and the musty aroma of "lavender and old lace."

The Album could have been expanded to twice its size with pictures of later generations which would be flattering to any family history. This however is primarily a story of pioneers. Some pictures although applicable, military and otherwise, had to be eliminated because they would not make a good photo-engraving.

PART III

Family Lineage

For your convenience as well as providing emphasis, I repeat a paragraph from PART II which many may have skipped:

> A study of the lineage data in PART I made obvious that a real picture of the Rosebush family could not be had without the allied family stories—Finkle, Stewart, Sheldon, Shipman, Perkins and Curtis as well as the Burdick-Hubbard and Peckham families which were found already available. Aside from this and family records and books already examined locally, the only information to start with was "New York State" for the location of Curtis and Shipman, although Weighty Curtis' birthplace was given as Oneida County. John Stewart was given as "New York State" with nothing on his wife except her age—105 years. Nathaniel is indicated as coming from Rhode Island and his daughter Lucetta as born in DeRuyter, N.Y. Betsy Finkle was an absolute blank except that I remember grandfather Rosebush saying she was a "woman from the Catskills."

The Burdick-Hubbard and Peckham lineages offered no particular uncertainties so these tabulations are set up first. Additional information and stories on them will be found in PART II. The Sheldon lineage after a slow start, developed rapidly to completion and thus follows the Peckham lineage. The Perkins line was a tough problem with a surprise successful ending as already described in PART II, with the added gift of the key to the Richmond family. These two follow in that order.

In the library of the New England Historical Society in Boston, I found the Cody charts on the Shipman family showing a Chloe Shipman born in 1768. A discussion of these charts and other Shipman data is given in detail so far as established, in Appendix III. Conclusions with designated assumptions are indicated in the Shipman tables following the Richmond Family.

The Curtis family has been a blind alley until recently as will be seen later. It may have been in Ballston or Saratoga (then Albany) County, N.Y. about 1785; it was in Oneida County about 1795 and from there made its way to the Bay of Quinte on the north shore of Lake Ontario. In that area in 1815, George Rosebush met and married Weighty Curtis when they were both about twenty years old.

The story on the Stewards is only a little clearer. The given name turned out to be James instead of John, the surname Steward instead of Stewart. He married Olive Richmond in Ballston, N.Y. in 1791 according to old Presbyterian Church records there. (Item 121-2)

Lineages of other families joined with us since 1900, Patten-McNaughton, Cass (Cobb joined by marriage in 1874), Ward etc., have been completed with the detail available and follow next in order.

The Finkle story has already been developed in PART II and the analysis of its many angles is shown in the lineage charts which precede the Rosier-Rosebush tabulations.

As has been seen by those studying PART II, the Rosebush story is a nebulous thing; but there seems to be a fairly visible trail without definite personal relationships, leading back to Uzes and Nimes in old Languedoc, France—and to the nearby communities DEROSIER and ROSIER in the present provinces of Correze and Lozere, which I think gave name to the family. This story will follow the family tables. It comes last because of its complexity and consequent length.

At the end of PART III, I have set up lineage tables of the DesRosiers Family which may have been related in the distant past. For a hundred years at least, some of them have used the name Rosebush. They probably came from near Saumur about 140 miles southwest of Paris, France and about the same distance north of the Province of Correze the most likely origin of the "de Rosier" family.

Item numbers referred to will be found in the Bibliography of PART II where extracts from published records are given in detail.

† means a link in the chain of lineage to be carried on in proper order in the next succeeding generation; or "of him, further."

S.p. stands for sine prole a Latin phrase used in genealogies meaning: without issue.

With reference to the Revolutionary War service of William Sheldon Jr., Generation VI, the Rhode Island Civil and Military List did not appear to cover it. So I wrote the State Record Commissioner for information on William Jr. of Hopkinton or Richmond and received the following reply:

Our files contain the following records:

WILLIAM SHELDON, JR., "16-50 able" (Military Census of R.I. for 1777, page 170).

William Sheldon, seaman, Ship "Columbus," Continental Navy. Entered January 1, 1776, discharged at New London, Conn., April 24th, Roll from commission of ship to November 16, 1776. (Roll in R.I. Hist. Soc. Coll.)

William Sheldon, private, Ensign John Larkin's division, Capt. Jonathan Maxon's company, Col. Charles Dyer's regiment; ordered on duty November 8, 1777. (Military Returns, State Archives, IV, p 14). This was the 2nd Reg't, King's County, R.I. Militia; the 2nd Company from Richmond, R.I., was commanded by Captain Jonathan Maxon. (Smith's Military Hist. of R.I., vol. 1, p. 352.)

William Sheldon, Matross, Capt. John Garzia's company, Col. Robert Elliott's regiment of artillery. Time of enlistment, —R.I. State Brigade in U.S. Service, 12 mos.; Mar. 18, 1779, Oct. 11, 1779—March 1780. (Military Papers of R.I., R.I. Historical Society Coll. III, p 447).

It is not possible for us to determine from our records if the foregoing services apply to more than one man of this name, inasmuch as he or they made no pension application from this State.

Sincerely yours,
(s)
Dr. Grace M. Sherwood,
State Record Commissioner

From the dates of service given above, one man could have accomplished all three records, but service in Captain Maxon's Company from Richmond seems the most likely. My mother said that William, her mother's grandfather, served in the Revolution. Mother of course got this from her mother Elizabeth but the chances are that grandmother actually said her great grandfather because she never missed anything on her family military history. Her grandfather being born in 1771, was too young for that service.

Regarding these two Nathaniels, father and son, the D.A.R. Records in the Reference Library, State Educational Bldg., Albany, N.Y., Book 12, p 166 and p 190 and Perkins Family Bibles reveal the following: During the Revolutionary War the elder Nathaniel was commissioned commander of the Privateer "Surprise" a schooner in Massachusetts service, Aug. 10, 1781. He had first entered service July 17, 1775 when he joined a Company being raised for the defense of the sea coast in York (Washington) County, R.I. and stationed in the town of Bradford. He served until Nov. 24, 1776 being then mustered out by the Master of this function, Peter Noyes.

From Revolutionary War records, Herbert O. Brigham, State Record Commissioner of R.I., advised: Nathaniel Perkins, Quartermaster, was exchanged by Cartel between Rhode Island and Major Hill, Commissioner of Prisoners for the British, Nov. 29, 1778.

Before the War the elder Nathaniel operated a schooner on the Hudson river and lived at Poughkeepsie. In 1775 when the War started and the son Nathaniel was thirteen years old, they went back to Rhode Island. Some time later in those waters, the father was taken prisoner by the British. On Aug. 8, 1778, when the son was sixteen years old, he enlisted at South Kingston as a substitute for his father who was still a prisoner. This service was in Capt. Paris Gardener's Co., Col. Thomas Potter's regiment. He served twenty days as First Sergeant in Sullivan's Expedition. He again enlisted in the same company and regiment for nine months and in 1779 for three months to Mar. 6, 1780. All of the above service as First Sergeant was pensioned on Certificate dated 3-6-31 and paid at the New York Agency.

After the War the young Nathaniel moved to Herkimer Co., N.Y. Many years later his sons Nathaniel and Benjamin came on foot from Elmira which they had reached by boat, to find the tract of land in Independence, N.Y. granted to their father for his services during the Revolutionary War. This was Lot 106, Allegany County. The father who by this time had become a Minister of the Gospel moved to this Lot 106 from Herkimer County in 1824. These men were among those who settled the town of Independence. The boys Nathaniel and Benjamin came by way of Otsego Lake where a dam was built at Cooperstown. When this dam after filling, was intentionally broken, it caused a flood to go down the Susquehanna River carrying their rafts with their family cargo. Near Sayre, Pa., they entered the Chemung River and then poled or walked their rafts up that river and up the Canisteo as far as practicable, when they made their way overland by way of Almond. Usually several families joined forces on such a trip.

THE CURTIS FAMILY

According to grandfather George D. Rosebush, his father-in-law, John C. Curtis served in the Revolution "in the Central States"; he thought New York. So an inquiry was sent to National Archives and Records in Washington and I included James Steward in the request for information. The reply follows:

"A careful search of the Revolutionary War Pension and bounty land records in the National Archives has failed to reveal files for John Curtis, John C. Curtis and James Steward as described. The name James Steward is recorded on page 90 of the publication—A Census of Pensioners for Revolutionary or Military Service . . . . . as Returned by the Marshalls of the Several Judicial Districts, under the Act for Taking the Sixth Census, printed by Blair and Rives, Washington, 1841. However, this publication has been found to contain some names of pensioners who cannot be identified as recipients of Federal pensions. Some of these pensioners have been identified as State pensioners. It is possible that, when the Census was taken in 1840, State pensions were confused with Federal pensions. It is possible that the information you desire concerning James Steward can be obtained by consulting the archival agency at the capitol of the State from which he served."

Pursuing the suggestion in the last sentence above, I wrote both for Curtis and Steward to Archives Division of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and of the State of New York. Mr. Edward J. Cronin, Secretary of the Commonwealth replied that no reference was found in their records as to pensions paid either to Curtis or Steward, but that the name of John Curtis, a private in the Massachusetts Line, appeared in the 1820 United States Pension List. The inquiry to the State of New York was referred to Miss Edna L. Jacobsen, Associate Librarian in charge of the Manuscripts and History Section of the New York State Library at Albany where it was stated the Revolutionary War Records are maintained. Miss Jacobsen went into the matter thoroughly and gave complete references but stated that so far as they knew, no pensions were granted to Revolutionary War veterans by New York State.

Two theories may be advanced for this situation—one, relative to service in Massachusetts, the other relative to service in New York State. The first is that John C. Curtis moved from Massachusetts to New York State, lived in outlying districts and, pensions not being seriously considered until 1818, he made no application. In 1795 he was living on the frontier in Oneida County. About the year 1800 he moved to Ontario. Thus being a settler in a different country, he had no thought of a pension from the United States or of Land Bounty claims. Consequently his name appears in the publication of the 20th Congress in 1828; (Item 149). The second theory is that his service in New York State, if that was where he served, was with the Militia and not the New York Line as covered for example in the two listings in Item 148. Service in the Militia usually precluded any pension although toward the end of the war, a man could get land bounty rights when he signed for service. (See Appendix I—The Battleground of America.) But a claim had to be filed to secure the land under the bounty rights. At any rate John C. Curtis moved from the United States so he made no claim.

About 1785 he married Chloe Shipman and they had six children. The fifth, a daughter named Weighty (or Waity), was born in Oneida County, N.Y. in 1796. From what grandfather Rosebush told his daughter Jennie, we know that Betsy was the youngest child, being born in Ontario. The order of birth for all children would be about as follows:

John	born	1786. Elusive as the other Johns; no further information.
Samuel	"	1788. " " "
David	"	1789. Went to Texas when a young man.
Chloe	"	1793. Married Oliver Frazier.
Weighty	"	1796. Date is a tombstone computation. She married Feb. 5, 1815, in Ontario. George Rosebush son of Solomon.
Betsy	"	1800. Married John McIntyre.

George Rosebush was baptized as George Rosier, May 17, 1795, in Fredericksburgh, Lennox & Addington Counties, Ontario. He served in the Hastings County Militia in the War of 1812 and is not known to have gone any great distance otherwise, from his home community. Hence because of the birth of Betsy in Ontario, John C. Curtis must have moved his family there about the year 1800. George Rosebush married Weighty Curtis somewhere in the Bay of Quinte area presumably in a tiny Baptist church on the River Trent but all the records of that church were destroyed by fire in the early days.

According to the U.S. Census of 1790, in Canajoharie Town of the Mohawk valley, N.Y., were two Frazier families. This community and Balls Town forty miles to the east, were the only places I found where Fraziers spelled the name in this way. In Ontario it seems to have been written Fraser without exception. But Weighty's sister Chloe married a Frazier and my great uncle was named after him, Oliver Frazier Rosebush.

In Caughnawaga ("where the Christians live") Town (now Fonda), ten miles down the Mohawk river to the east, there were two Curtises, several McIntyres and Barce Chard with wife and three children, one of whom was Chloe, a baby of one year. The name Chard I think was French and originally La Chardonneret (Goldfinch), or something similar. Catherine, "Catta" Rosebush, daughter of Joseph, was the mother of this baby. She had married Barce Chard in 1785 in Balls Town. But Chloe wasn't a common name west of Albany. Where did baby Chloe get it?

No Fraser, Frazier or McIntyre records have revealed any pertinent information. Likewise no records have been found in Ontario on this Curtis family, although there were Curtis families in the Midland District. And some of them made application for land grants as settlers; (Item 138).

In this Curtis search, help from time to time had been given by Harlow D. Curtis, Historian of the Curtiss-Curtis Society of Stratford, Connecticut. Mr. Curtis at first agreed that John C. Curtis appeared to be an enigma and that probably the only solution would be in finding a record of his death which was a very vague possibility. I had considered the various Curtises living at Ballston, N.Y. and vicinity in 1790 as shown by the first U.S. Census, because of the fact that a number of Shipmans of the right male names also lived there.

Finally in a last effort, I submitted to Mr. Curtis in condensed form all the facts I had assembled including a study of two John Curtis families in Ballston, compared to the probable birthdates of the children of John C. and Chloe (Shipman) Curtis. But Mr. Harlow Curtis knew the history of all the Curtis people in Ballston and along the Mohawk, with the exception of two in Fonda and so, he easily ruled them out one by one. Then after this analysis, he produced in conjunction with the U.S. Census of 1800, the following suggestion—

Genealogy of the Curtiss-Curtis Family, pp 28, 71, 72-3
(Supplement to 1903 Edition, published 1953)
Compiled by Harlow D. Curtis, Historian.

1. Widow Elizabeth of Stratford, Conn., 1638
2. John
3. Joseph
4. Joseph
5. James
6. John b. 1748; to Canada; no further record

The detail from James[5] is as follows:

5. James b. Oct. 24, 1716;
m. (1) Feb. 2, 1743, Elizabeth Burroughs. She d. Jan. 14, 1745.
They had—Ann who married Henry Ellsworth;
Elizabeth who died in infancy
(2) 1747, Keziah Crofut. They had:

6. John	b. Apr. 14,	1748
Betty	b. Nov. 4,	1749	m. ———— Somers.
Sarah	b. July 24,	1751	m. John Hubbell
Keziah	b. Mar. 10,	1754	m. Elisha Hubbell (brother of John)
James	b. Jan. 1,	1756	m. Thankful ————
Avis	b. Nov. 18,	1757	m. 1777, Timothy Chapman, b. June 3, 1752, in England
(She and Timothy lived near Bath, Ont.)
Robert	b. Mar. 18,	1760	m. 1786, Jerusha Wright
Elijah	b. Dec. 31,	1761	m. 1790, Content Wheeler, to Saratoga Co.
Ruth	b. Feb. 16,	1764	m. Dec. 25, '88, Abel Waters
Eli	b. Jan. 1,	1766	m. 1791, Polly Mills
Anna	b. Apr. 29,	1768	m. Oct. 28, 1789, David B. Wheeler.
Enoch	b. Sept. 1,	1771	unmarried.

If John[6] married in 1766, he could have left married children behind him when he went to Canada, which would fit John C. Curtis and family per U.S. Census of 1800, as follows—

Deerfield township, Oneida County, N.Y.

John Curtis	b. 1755-1774; wife same
3 males	b. 1784-1790
1 male	b. 1791-1800
3 females	b. 1791-1800.

Mr. Harlow Curtis adds that the above record clicks exactly with my record of John C. Curtis and family and he thinks the above Census record therefore covers my John.

Finally I might call attention to the names which John and Chloe (Shipman) Curtis gave their children. John the eldest of course carried his father's name. Chloe had brothers nearest to her in age, named Samuel and David. These same names are given to the next two sons. Chloe the daughter carries her mother's name. And I daresay that is how Barce Chard's daughter Chloe got her name. Weighty I think was in fact Waity—not an uncommon name in those days but we are left guessing as to where she got it. Betsy was perhaps named after her grandfather's sister Betty.

THE STEWARD FAMILY

Refs.—Bibliography Items 103, 121(2) and 144 to 147 both inclusive;
Appendix I; Mrs. Nathaniel Perkins, Albany, N.Y.

There were at least a dozen men named James Stewart and Steward who were in the Hudson and Mohawk Valleys during Colonial and Revolutionary days. Many of them served with Massachusetts and New York troops in the Revolution, both in the Line and in Militia regiments. Others who were more recent arrivals from the British Isles, remained loyal to the King and joined the Royal Regiments under Sir John Johnson and others.

Every attempt to sort out these various people bearing the same name and for use in this genealogy, has been fruitless. When it was finally disclosed by land conveyances in Fabius, N.Y. (Appen. IV., Onondaga Co.), that the correct name was James I. Steward, it was hoped this slight difference in spelling would serve to identify his family and thus disclose his antecedents. And when he was definitely ascertained to be the same man as the pensioner referred to in the Census of Pensioners, June 1, 1840, "residing under his own roof," age 70, it indicated that the Pension Bureau might have information on him. The book "Revolutionary Soldiers of Onondaga County," 1912, stated "This pensioner in Fabius was said to have been 70 in 1840, probably a mistake for 79." If he was seventy nine, this age makes him two years older than the New Braintree boy in Item 144, so a possible common identity there, is rather doubtful unless his age was actually 77 years instead of 79.

The result of the search in the Pension records has already been told under The Curtis Family, just preceding. But nevertheless the documentary record as above, is proof that James I. Steward served in the Revolutionary War. Many who served did not draw pensions. In many instances, due to the nature of Militia service (see Appen. I—Battleground of America), no record at all of such service survives.

With this avenue of information through War records closed to us, we can only set down the immediate family of James I. Steward as we know it.

Generation

I. Josiah Cass was a schoolteacher in England prior to 1775 when he came to America. Joseph Cass was born in 1764 and Elihu Cass in 1766. From these records, the assumption is that Joseph and Elihu were sons of Josiah who was probably born between 1740 and 1745. His wife is unknown. Josiah and Elihu went to Canada from New England in June, 1778, as Loyalists. Josiah is listed on page 376, Appendix C (Item 7 above) as "Case or Cass, E Dt., Grand (Ottawa) River" and a member of the Royal Regiment of New York. Elihu is listed on page 396, same reference, as "Elijah or Elihue Case, Drummer, R.R.N.Y." Other references show that Elihu enlisted in Sir John Johnson's Reg't, 1st Bn., Captain John Daly's Company, Royal Yorkers. He was discharged 2 Dec., 1783. He settled in New Carlisle in 1784, moved to Grand River in 1790 and married Elizabeth Story, 3 Dec., 1795 (See III (c) below). She was b. 29 Apr. 1779.

JUSTUS GROH AND WIFE ANNA KATHERINE WEISENFELD

In 1848 there was a revolution in Germany aimed at securing for the people, constitutional government. This was a part of a general upheaval for similar reasons, in most European countries. But it failed, due to machinations of anti-democratic rulers, particularly King Frederick William IV of Prussia. This revolt also brought into prominence for the first time, Otto von Bismarck, later Chancellor of the German Empire.

Many German liberals and democrats who were disgusted with the failures of 1848, or troubled with the ensuing reaction, emigrated to the United States. One of the more notable of these was Carl Schurz.

So it was that the parents of Anna Ida Groh, wife of Alanson Cobb Cass in Generation IV, came to America. Her father Justus Groh was born August 16, 1814 in Lauterbach, Germany. His father kept an inn there. This inn, built of heavy stones, is still in existence. Justus was skilled in several trades—brewing, meat processing and carpentering. In addition he was a good musician, playing both piano and violin. Justus' wife, Anna Katherine Weisenfeld was born in Frankfort, Germany, May 20, 1827. She arrived in the United States May 5, 1848. About this same time Justus also arrived in the United States and found employment as a coachman on a large estate near Baltimore.

On March 20, 1849, Justus and Anna were married and in 1850 they moved to Tomkins Cove on the Hudson River in Rockland County, N.Y. almost across from Peekskill. In 1851 they moved to Freeport, Illinois and in 1853 to Vernon County, Wisconsin where they "took-up" land, built a log cabin as a starter and lived on this property the rest of their days. They had the following children:

Justus	b. June 21,	1850,	Tomkins Cove, N.Y.

Miss Kathryn O. Ward,
Rochester, N.Y.

Dear Miss Ward:

Replying to your letter of April 28th, I beg to say that I have made inquiry about the Hackey family and find that Mrs. George Palmer (Sarah Hackey) is a daughter of the late David Hackey and is residing at 419 W. Maple St., Canton, Ill.
Amelia married a man by the name of Hamlin; both she and husband died some years ago; one son died some years ago; another son resides in Chicago and I understand is an attorney; although I have made many inquiries can not get any information about Margaret.
I remember a son John Hackey; have not seen in the past year or two but am told he resides here.

Hope the above information will help you.

Very truly yours,
(S) J. E. Bradley

Extracts from a letter dated November 1, 1951 by Kathryn Ward Wright, 78 Alpine Drive, Rochester, N.Y.

My dear Ward:

I never knew my grandparents on father's side. They came from Europe; grandfather Ward from Ireland, grandmother Ward from England. Her name was Jackson. My father was their eldest son,—named Richard Jackson Ward. He was born in Rush, N.Y. in 1833, died in Rochester in 1893. He had brothers named William, George (died in the Civil War), Thomas, Joseph and two sisters Elizabeth and Sarah. ——— Grandparents ——— probably left Europe about 1830——— They eloped and came to America——— ——— settled in Rush, N.Y.———.

About 1918 ——— I wrote to the Mayor of Canton, Illinois asking for information concerning a family related to our mother——— Julia Amelia. Her mother's maiden name was Amelia Hackey——— and this family in Canton, Illinois were cousins of mother's. When their father Daniel Hackey died, they sent us a newspaper clipping (now lost) which told us that he was a descendant of John Quincy Adams. Hence our mother was also related to J. Q. Adams.

Then on December 2, 1920, I received the enclosed letter from Harry Hamlin a relative of Mother's.

HARRY F. HAMLIN
Attorney and Counsellor at Law
30 North La Salle St.,
Chicago

Miss Kathryn O. Ward,
112 Kislingbury St.,
Rochester, N.Y.

Dear Miss Ward:

Your letter which you wrote to Mrs. Palmer my aunt, has been turned over to me for a reply. I happen to be the son of the Amelia Hamlin whom you referred to in your letter. I recall many times of having heard my Mother speak of your Mother. ————————————. It is true that we are related to John Quincy Adams. Our grandfather whom you referred to in your letter was the son of Sarah Adams who was a first cousin of John Quincy Adams. It is apparent that Sarah Adams' father must have been a brother of the elder John Adams who was President of the United States. Sarah Adams' husband was either from Holland or the son of a Hollander. ————————————

With sincere good wishes, I am,

Very Cordially,
Harry F. Hamlin (He was a Major in 1st A.E.F.)

CAPTAIN DAVID HAACKE

Refs.: County of York, (Ontario), Gazetteer; W. H. Irwin & Co., 1881. History of Fulton County, Illinois; Charles C. Chapman & Co., Peoria, Illinois, 1879.

In the York County Gazetteer the township of Markham referred to in information given by Miss Grace Hutty of Toronto, shows for the year 1881, the names of George Haacke, Ringwood and William Haacke, Markham. No Hackeys are shown. In his letter of December 1920, Mr. Harry F. Hamlin states that the first Hackey was a Hollander. Hence it is likely that the name was really Haacke. With this idea, another check was made of the files in Newberry Library, Chicago, where reference was found to the History of Fulton County:

p. 551—Captain David Haacke was born in Markham Township, Upper Canada, July 25, 1801. He came to Fort Clark (now Peoria) as early as 1822 and to this county in 1827 and settled on a farm where he resided for forty eight years. He had lived in Canton during the past few years having partially retired from business. The Captain participated in the Black Hawk War with the Indians on Rock River in which the militia was defeated. He received his commission as Captain of the 32nd Reg. Ill. Militia from Governor John Reynolds. It is dated at Vandalia, Illinois, August 20, 1832 but ranking from April 13. (Abraham Lincoln was also a Captain of Militia in this affair.) His parents were John and Hannah (Adams) Haacke, the former of Holland, the latter of New York City and a cousin of John Quincy Adams.

Captain Haacke has been married four times. In 1823 he married Margaret Barker of Tazewell County, deceased; in 1836 he married Sarah Bull of this county. She died in 1843. He was again married, this time to Melinda Edwards of this county. By this marriage two children are living, Margaret the wife of George Holmes of Stark Co. and Amelia wife of Lovel Hamlin of Canton. He married his present wife Mahala Lauderback, April 1, 1851. They have three children: Barbara living in Stark Co.; Sarah lives with parents and John of Joshua township. Mr. Haacke is one of the very few early pioneers now living and his accounts of the early times are very interesting as also those related by his wife whose parents came into Schuyler County in 1823. We give in this volume a portrait of Captain Haacke.

THE MEYER FAMILY

Refs.—Mrs. William Meyer, Milwaukee, Wisconsin; Mrs. F. Ward Rosebush, Atlanta, Georgia.

Paternal Side

Conrad Meyer was a coachman for the margrave or grand-duke of Baden which was a German State on the upper Rhine. He was born about 1820 and came to America during the German Revolution which centered on the year 1848. He died during the Spring of 1900.

The old family home was at Gutach, Schwarzwaldbahn, Baden. There are two Gutachs; the one in question is near Triberg in the Black Forest. The Village Burgomeister said that the family home was over 400 years old, the oldest home in the Black Forest steadily in use during all that time.

Conrad Meyer inherited this home but preferred to remain in America. So instead of claiming his inheritance, he gave it to his oldest sister Anne Marie who married a man named Summ. He had one other sister Christine older than himself and no brothers. Christine Summ, a descendant of Anne Marie, lives in the old home.

About 1850 Conrad Meyer married Walburga Ripple whose parents were Joseph and Dora (————?) Ripple. Their children were:

NOTE—Re "farm names" (p 117 of 1st Ref., Mrs. Xan): . . . . . Norwegian surnames. They are very confusing to people who have not been brought up with them. For Norwegians, a woman like my mother had a terribly long list of names, but they trace her from the cradle to the grave. We all understood it, but the Yankees would throw up their hands in despair of ever unraveling it. Thorild was her Christian name. Her father's name was Andres, so she was Thorild Andresdatter. At successive times in her life, she bore the surnames of Böe, Leine, Juve, Kjeldalen and Olsen. Her father owned the Böe farm, therefore Böe placed her on the land. Then she married Mathis Olson (son of Ole) who lived on the Haevre farm. This made him Mathis Olson Haevre before his marriage. After he married, he bought the Leine farm, so he had to change his name and that of his family to Leine and the Haevre was dropped. After a while he bought the Juve farm and lived on it until he came to America. Then Leine was forgotten. On all his sea chests and boxes was written in fine large painted script, "Mathis Olson Juve." He bought the Kjeldalen farm in Winchester, at which time he dropped the Juve name and was known thereafter as Kjeldalen—Mathis Olson Kjeldalen (always pronounced Cheldarn). Of course his children were known as that too. I was always Thurina Mathisdatter Kjeldalen among the Norwegians and Tilla Olson to the Yankees.

These names were so confusing to the Yankees that most Norwegians changed them after a while. The distinctive names of Juve and Skare and Daalan and Böe were dropped and people went by their father's Christian names such as Olson, Johnson and Larson. There are so many of these names now, that you can hardly keep the families straight. I have to stop and study it out every time I am introduced to a new young person. I believe it would have been better if they had kept their old names, with maybe changing the spelling.

This book is a real human interest story—as well worth reading as "The Egg and I" or "Cheaper by the Dozen." It is however, unusually unique in that it records the experiences of an immigrant family group covering a detailed story of life in the "Old Country," the preparations for the long voyage to America and the transition through three generations from the old life to the new. It does this with amazing minuteness of detail touching on language, customs, clothing, food, work, names, personalities, gossip, religion, education and home management. But withal, it is a highly active, human story abounding in interest from cover to cover. Genealogical lineage tables are given at the end.

THE PALATINES

The Palatinate was situated between the rival powers of France and Germany. It was located on the upper Rhine River. Its capitol was Heidelberg and the chief cities were Mayence, Worms, Mannheim, Spires and Strassburg. It originated in 1294 by separation from Bavaria and was destroyed by wars following the French Revolution. Its people were called Palatines.

The migration of the Palatines was a result of the unrest caused by religious upheavals and by the machinations of Louis XIV of France; so that the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes in 1685, as for the French Huguenots, also became the great fester of Palatine discontent. Of the 13,000 in the Summer and Fall exodus of 1709, 5,500 disappeared in England and Scotland; 3,800 went to Ireland and 3,700 to America.

Prior to this however, Louis XIV, with his eyes on the Rhine as the desired eastern boundary of France, in 1688 had sent General Montalass with an army of 50,000 to sweep Alsace-Lorraine. They pillaged, robbed and plundered the country far and wide. Again in 1692 the same thing was repeated, perhaps with more dire distress to the inhabitants than the first visitation.

Later on, when agents appeared among the people offering free land in America, they were ripe for any means of leaving their ravaged country and the exodus of 1709 as above was the result.

During the War of the Spanish Succession, Marshall Villars crossed the Rhine unexpectedly in May 1707, terrorized southwestern Germany, plundering and requisitioning freely on the Palatinate—Wurtemberg, Baden and the Swabian Circle . . . . . The winter of 1708 which followed the retirement of the invader across the Rhine, was exceptionally severe.

Johann Philip Finckell appears on no list of emigrant parties but from the statement made on page 282 of the above book as to the New York Subsistence List, it is evident that he and his family came to America in 1709 or 1710. Several names on the Subsistence List show on no other published list.

George Finkle B-V apparently is the only source for the term "Doctor" given his grandfather. There is nothing to indicate any reason for the term except perhaps "window dressing." The claim that he came from Prussia (39) (remember, George was writing his letter to Canniff in the time of Bismarck), also is in error because his grandfather George says in his Claim (38) that he is a native of America. The Examiner notes him down as "near age 70."

Quisenberry evidently thought it was the other George, the probable nephew, who served in the Royal Rangers because George, Senior, would then have been near sixty. The point is good but there is an answer. And bear in mind that a lot of information has come to light and been made available since Quisenberry wrote in 1895. Here is the answer as I see it:

George Sr. disposed of most of his lands in Dutchess County, N.Y. in 1759 (68) and a "George Fingle" is shown (70-71) as a soldier in the 80th Foot, a regular British regiment, from 1759 to 1765, a full six year enlistment. The 80th Foot, (Gage's) served in the Ticonderoga campaign and in the capture of Montreal. This six years of military service covering the last half of the French and Indian War, made George even at sixty, with that veteran experience with British regulars, a desirable recruit for the Royal Rangers.

Authority for the detail in various family branches will be noted at the heading for each branch. Remarks or notes on most of the above references will be found in the general Bibliography in PART II.

In the following table, the first three generations are based on the earliest references above but are strictly hypothetical.

NOTES: Roman numerals to the left of a paragraph and Arabic numerals at the right of given names, refer to the generation. For example, the lineage of Lewis' family in one branch of the VIII generation, would be indicated thus—Glenn[8], Bessie[7], Hiram[6], Lewis[5], Lewis[4], Joseph[3]. Since Joseph is the first head of our family in America whom we are sure of, we stop there. Abraham and Jean though probable, are conjectural. Arabic numbers to the left of given names indicate that person is in a regular line of descent or in other words, is a parent. To continue his or her line, look for the same number in the next generation.

Catherine, the first child of Joseph[3] and Hannah, is not given a number because Dr. Harry W. Mack of Detroit, is writing the Chard-Sine-Mack genealogy which includes her line and other connections also.

The sign † means "of whom further"—namely, that more is to follow about this person.

FROM FRANCE TO THE FAMILY OF THE FIRST JOSEPH ROSIER IN AMERICA

(2) June 25, 1893, William Leslie NICHOLS, b. Mar. 7, 1860; d. July 14, 1924, Bolivar, N.Y. Data for some of the following notes on William L. Nichols was secured from two books by John P. Herrick, long-time publisher and oil man of Bolivar: Empire Oil, Dodd, Mead & Co., 1949 and Bolivar, N.Y., Pioneer Oil Town, The Ward Ritchie Press, Los Angeles. William L. Nichols was born in Youngstown, Pa. His real family name was Spencer. But his father was killed in the Civil War. So he was adopted by the Nichols family and thus took that name. He lived near Ischua, N.Y. until he was sixteen. He than started in railway service and became a telegrapher. Later he became purchasing agent for the Tidewater Pipe Line Co. In that capacity he came to Bolivar, liked the prospects, severed his connection with Tidewater and became an independent oil producer. He also developed the local telephone company and was its proprietor and manager until he sold it to Bell Telephone Company, August 23, 1910.

After that he went into the real estate business with J. P. Herrick of Bolivar and added later an insurance agency which his son and grandson still operate. Jennie and Wm. Nichols had:

The Commanding General, Fleet Marine Force, Pacific, takes pleasure in COMMENDING

CAPTAIN JOHN M. ROSEBUSH,
UNITED STATES MARINE CORPS RESERVE

for service as set forth in the following

CITATION:

"For meritorious and efficient performance of duty while serving with a Marine amphibian tractor battalion. While serving as a platoon leader, company executive officer, and then company commander of an amphibian tractor battalion from 15 February, 1943, to 15 April, 1945, Captain ROSEBUSH displayed a constant professional ability. While enroute to BOUGAINVILLE, he requested permission from the captain of his ship to augment the short handed gun crews with trained antiaircraft machine gunners from his platoon. On the night of 14 November, 1943, when the ship was subjected to repeated torpedo attacks, these extra gunners manned all the machine guns on the ship, successfully defending it from damage. After landing at BOUGAINVILLE, he, by his superior knowledge of amphibian tractor operation, succeeded in mapping and breaking an amphibian tractor trail two miles through heavy jungle in front of our front lines to a proposed regimental defensive sector on the TOROKINA RIVER. After the regiment moved into the position he supervised their supply by amphibian tractors for a period of several weeks. During the recapture of GUAM, he served as amphibian tractor control officer for a Marine regiment and worked tirelessly, often under heavy mortar fire, to obtain the most efficient use from the amphibian tractors which were the only means of reinforcing and supplying our advancing troops. His conduct throughout was in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

CITATION:

"For meritorious achievement in connection with operations against the enemy while serving with a Marine amphibian tractor battalion in KOREA from 14 March to 3 December 1953. Serving as executive officer and later as commanding officer, Major ROSEBUSH displayed exceptional ability, initiative and professional skill in the performance of his duties. Although his unit was assigned the task of performing infantry missions, he demonstrated a thorough grasp of all phases of the amphibian tractor field in addition to a sound knowledge of infantry tactics. He exhibited a high degree of initiative, personal courage and stamina while inspecting the front line and outpost positions which were frequently subjected to the hazards of enemy small arms, mortar and artillery fire. He maintained an aggressive attitude at all times, ensuring that trenches, bunkers and various installations were in the best locations and properly dug in and camouflaged. His insistence upon the highest standards of personal conduct, discipline and combat readiness were instrumental in the battalion's successful prosecution of its assigned missions. Through his meticulous attention to detail, he enabled the battalion to maintain a high state of personal and material readiness for amphibious operations. Major ROSEBUSH'S outstanding devotion to duty, indomitable spirit and conduct throughout, served as an inspiration to all who observed him and were in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

238. The story of John, born in 1840, is obscure, particularly on that part of his life before his 58th year. Apparently most of those earlier years were spent in the timber of Minnesota,—logging and saw mills—or in the Red River basin and in North Dakota. He may have trapped some for furs or traded with the Indians; perhaps also with Louis Riel across the border,—Bois Brules and Metis. Lena Cluett whom he married about the time of the Spanish-American War, was a one-eighth Chippewa girl. She was born May 17, 1870, lived at times on the White Earth Indian Reservation and died February 11, 1914 in Minnesota of tuberculosis. They had the following children:

The following is taken from a Michigan State Convention of Police publication for June 1953, Bay City, Michigan:

Lieutenant of Traffic since April 12, 1937, William Samuel Rosebush on July 23 of this year, will celebrate his 34th anniversary as a member of Bay City's Police Department.

He joined the force in 1919 and soon after was made relief man on the desk in his first promotion. On January 1, 1936, he was named Traffic Manager of the Department. Lieutenant Rosebush took a brief leave of absence in 1950 in an unsuccessful bid for nomination as sheriff of Bay County.

Born February 17, 1890 at Linwood, he received his early schooling there and later took night courses for two years. Before joining the force, he was an inspector for the New York Central Railroad, street car motorman and superintendent in the city trolley system. He was married to Margaret M. Powers of Bay City, August 17, 1909 and they have four children . . . . . .

Lieutenant Rosebush is a charter member of the F.O.P. and a former president of the Bay City Metropolitan Club. He is a member of the Elks and Eagles Clubs and the Citizen Traffic Board instructing civilian police during World War II. . . . . .

HIRAM ROSEBUSH

Information from files of U.S. Pension Bureau and from Adjutant General's Office
July-December, 1886

Principal paper is Claim for pension by Sylvia Rosebush widow of Samuel Rosebush, mother, age 70; Columbiaville, Lapeer County, Michigan, July 1, 1886.

Hiram Rosebush, age 24, enlisted at Lockport, N.Y., August 26, 1862, for three years, in Company M, 1st New York Light Artillery, Volunteers. He contracted typhoid pneumonia by reason of exposure and died at Wafford Home, in Camp near Stafford Court House, Virginia, February 9, 1863. This camp was a short distance north of Fredericksburg, Virginia.

In her statement Sylvia Rosebush says that her husband Samuel aged 71, died at West Bay City, Michigan in July 1881; also that the surviving children under sixteen years of age at the date of Hiram's death, were:

Clara	born May 8,	1858
Edward	born Oct. 1,	1856
Adaline	born Mar. 1,	1854
David	born Mar. 29,	1852
Louis	born Aug. 6,	1850
Libbie (Elizabeth)	born Nov. 15,	1849

From the above term of service of Hiram Rosebush, it appears that he served during Lee's invasion of Maryland ending with the Battle of Antietam and in the struggle concluded with Burnside's bloody repulse at Fredericksburg.

LETTER ADVISING THE DEATH OF SOLDIER HIRAM ROSEBUSH

Stirling, Mar. 8, 1863

Dr. Friends—

I take my pen in hand with sorrow to inform you that I received a letter from Lieut. Woodbury on the 7 stating that Hiram Rosebush your brother, died on the night of the 8th of February, with the typhoid fever.

He further states that he has in his possession, one hundred and twenty nine dollars which will be sent your mother . . . . . (probably bounty money) . . . . . further states that I might have to write to him before they will send the money, (the mother did eventually receive it) but I think not. If I don't I think it will come soon. I will send you word as soon as I receive it.

Our family is all well at present Hoping these few lines will find you all the same.

Aunt Olive is dead and buried. I have another likeness which was sent for you.

No more at present. I remain your most affectionate uncle

Hiram Rosebush

239. JESSE ROSEBUSH and his wife Mariah Huff
of Bay City, Michigan

Information from files of U.S. Pension Bureau, 1886-1921 and from Adjutant General's Office, March 25, 1876.

Jesse Rosebush was born in Sidney township, Lot 29, Concession 9, Hastings County, Ontario, Canada, July 7, 1842. He went to Michigan in 1862. On December 15, 1863, he enlisted at Watertown, N.Y. as Private in Company L, 14th Regiment, New York Heavy Artillery, Volunteers, with 15th New York Engineers on attached service with Batteries L & M, 3d U.S. Enlistment was for three years or during the war. He was mustered into service at Rochester, N.Y., January 8, 1864. Physical description: light complexion, blue eyes, brown hair, height about 5 feet, 8 inches.

On February 5, 1865, he was wounded while coming from the picket line in front of Fort Stedman, Petersburg, Virginia. He was hit by a musket ball at the base of the left ear. The ball lodged at the angle of the lower jaw, was not located immediately but was evidently found and extracted the next day. This wound kept him absent from his organization during February, March and April, 1865.

Under General Orders #77, he was honorably discharged on Individual Muster Out Roll, June 17, 1865 at Point Lookout, Maryland. Until 1874 he lived in Canada; thereafter near Bay City, Michigan.

He was married to Mariah Huff of Ameliasburgh, Prince Edward County, Ontario, on June 15, 1867, by Rev. John C. Osborne, Wesleyan Minister, under a license obtained in Walkworth, Hastings County, Ontario. Mariah Huff was born March 29, 1844 at Ameliasburgh.

Jesse Rosebush died October 14, 1921 at Bay City, Michigan.

On March 31, 1915, Jesse named all children, living or dead as follows:

Charles Rosebush	48 years	born May 18
Minnie Sandback	46 years	born Aug. 23
Maude Martin	42 years	born Oct. 30
Hiram Rosebush	39 years	born July 7 dead
Mabel Pelky	36 years	born Aug. 29 dead
Floyd Rosebush	27 years	born July 14

The period of service of Jesse Rosebush and his presence at Fort Stedman where he was wounded, clearly indicates he was with Grant's Army of the Potomac through the Wilderness Campaign toward Richmond and in the final flanking siege around the south side of Petersburg. The last Confederate attempt to capture Fort Stedman and thus disrupt the Union line, took place in March, 1865. General Gordon's plans were carefully made in great detail and at first succeeded but he did not have enough reserve power. Lee's valiant army was bleeding to death.

Francois Roussiere was a native of Blain, Brittany. He was Deacon in the Church of the Artillery, Spitalfields with Fleurans Rivals a native of Puis Laurens, Languedoc.

Local family relationships are indicated in a number of the above entries.

The first two items, years 1571-5, implies that the trader class were among the first to leave France. The religious wars started about 1562. It was easy for traders to get away.

Given names sometimes persist in certain branches of a family for a long time. So a count was made of the given names in the above list and the result shows below:

Male		Female
John (Jean)	13	Mary	1
James	1	Marie	1
Simon	1	Susanne (Susane)	4
George	1	Anne	2
Philip	1	Francoise	1
Abraham	2	Marguerite	2
Jonas (plus 1 down)	1	Henriette	2
Julian	1	Marie Elizabeth	1
Marc	1	Marthe	1
Francis (Francois)	4	Jeane	1
Peter (Pierre)	4
Peter Jonas (plus 4 up)	1
Robert	1	There may be duplications.
Anthoine	1

Lewis (1661) and Edward (1667) are also in evidence (Item 114).

John is the predominant given name of course—it is probably the most widely used name in existence. Peter is second. The name George appears only once. So it may be assumed that George in the Rosebush family of the last 150 years, came mainly from the first George Finkle, 1720-1795. Some of the other names are repeated in the American families but in no way that could be called significant.

The Rosiers in America were principally in Massachusetts with several in Virginia and the Carolinas. I have listed only two of the latter (1675-1697). They seem too distant from Joseph's line to affect it.

In England, from about 1600 to 1720, the Rosiers (with variations), obviously drifted in and hovered about London and its French Huguenot churches because there they found French associations and friends; they received financial aid from the British Government and so it was a favorable spot to ply their trades, raise their families and educate their children. Farmers without other skills, probably did not linger but went to Ireland or to America,—mainly to the latter.

Most of them, no matter how situated, dropped the de from the name or otherwise saw it altered when they came to England, or in the course of their stay there. And church records themselves have many variations not intended by the owners but most likely induced by attempts to pronounce the name "Rosy-erre" as in English rather than "Rouzy-ay" or "Rossy-ay" as in French, especially southern French.

In 1618 Julian de Rasier is listed as an alien. In 1700, as sponsor at a baptism, John de Rossieres still clings to the de although Marc Rossiere of Uzes, Languedoc, had dropped the de by April, 1697 when he married Miss Marguerite le Coute of Paris. Yet under the Act of 1704, John de Rossieres became naturalized as such, giving the name of his father and mother as Peter and Gentil de Rossieres and his birthplace as Uzes, Languedoc.

Now as shown in PART II (p. 37), DEROSIER is a community near Egletons in the Province or "Departement" of Correze. It has also been shown that place-names are the commonest origin of family surnames. Furthermore, examples of the name variant with and without the de, show origin from Uzes in Languedoc. Uzes is only 150 miles from Egletons. It is only sixty miles from Florac in Lozere where there is another community called ROSIER. As for variations in spelling, take another look at the chronological list above and at Philip Rosier's thirty year record shown in Item 98, Vol. 1, PART II; also see Item 98, Vol. 31 and Item 109, p. 841. Also note in the year 1703 of the chronological list above that Abraham is born as the son of John and Susanne le Masson Rouziere but in 1708 they are written simply as John Rozier and Susane Masson.

The above record seems to bear out all that my grandfather Rosebush said about the origin of his family in France and its original name.

It is true that I can't prove anything. Beyond Joseph Rosier of New England, 1759, I find no definite link. I can not find even the Hannah Hart he married, though as shown heretofore (PART II, Items 95 a, b, c) there are three unmarried-by-the-record possibilities. Also there is a Joseph Rosier who married Dorcas Cutler in 1778 (Item 105), but no Cutler genealogy gives any clue to them. More of this later.

The Rosiers are far, very far from being a numerous family in the documentary records. Those who came to the French churches of London were Huguenots. Grandfather Rosebush said his family were French Huguenots who fled the religious wars. On February 8, 1934 George I. Rosebush, Stirling, Ontario, grandson of Joseph, Jr., wrote to brother Judson, "our ancestors came from some place in France. They left there in the time of war."

And here is a record written in 1904 that, while relative, is convincing. It is from the History of Bay County, Michigan by Richmond & Arnold, Chicago (Item 170). There are earlier histories of Bay County but this is the largest and the only one giving the information. Fred and Louis Rosebush and their sister Sylvia Turcott of Flint, Michigan told me about this record and Louis showed me an extract but I had to go to the State Library in Lansing to find the book. It reads: "The parents of Samuel Rosebush (Samuel[5] Joseph[4] Joseph[3]) were natives of Canada and their grandparents were born on DeRosa Street in Paris, France. This street was named after the original name of the family which was afterward changed to Rosebush."

This means that the family name was a place-name. It might be in Paris but it could be elsewhere. DeRosa is indicative but not quite right, as we know DeRosier is of Rosebush, a place—community or town. The item shows also that the father of our first Joseph came from France and fixes the date of his birth about 1700 or earlier. If this ancestor was the oldest in his family, his birth date could be as early as 1680. And if born "on DeRosa Street in Paris" the name would not appear in the London French Church Registers until marriage, or birth of children.

So what do we find in the Church Registers about 1700? There is the marriage in 1697 of Marc Rossiere of Uzes, Languedoc and Marguerite Henriette le Coute of Paris. But these names do not appear in America. In 1700 Jean de Rossieres acts as godfather. In 1703 John and Susanne (le Masson) Rouziere have a son Abraham; in 1706 a daughter Susanne, in 1708 Marthe. In the entry for these daughters the surname is spelled Rosier and Rozier. The given names Marthe and Susanne do not appear in the early Rosier families in America. But Susannah and Anne are used frequently. Abraham however, could incline toward Biblical names resulting in Joseph, Samuel, Solomon, Isaac, Jacob, Abraham and Peter among his descendants. Three generations before him in 1581, another Abraham ("J.f." probably means a young man) was living with G. Herson in London.

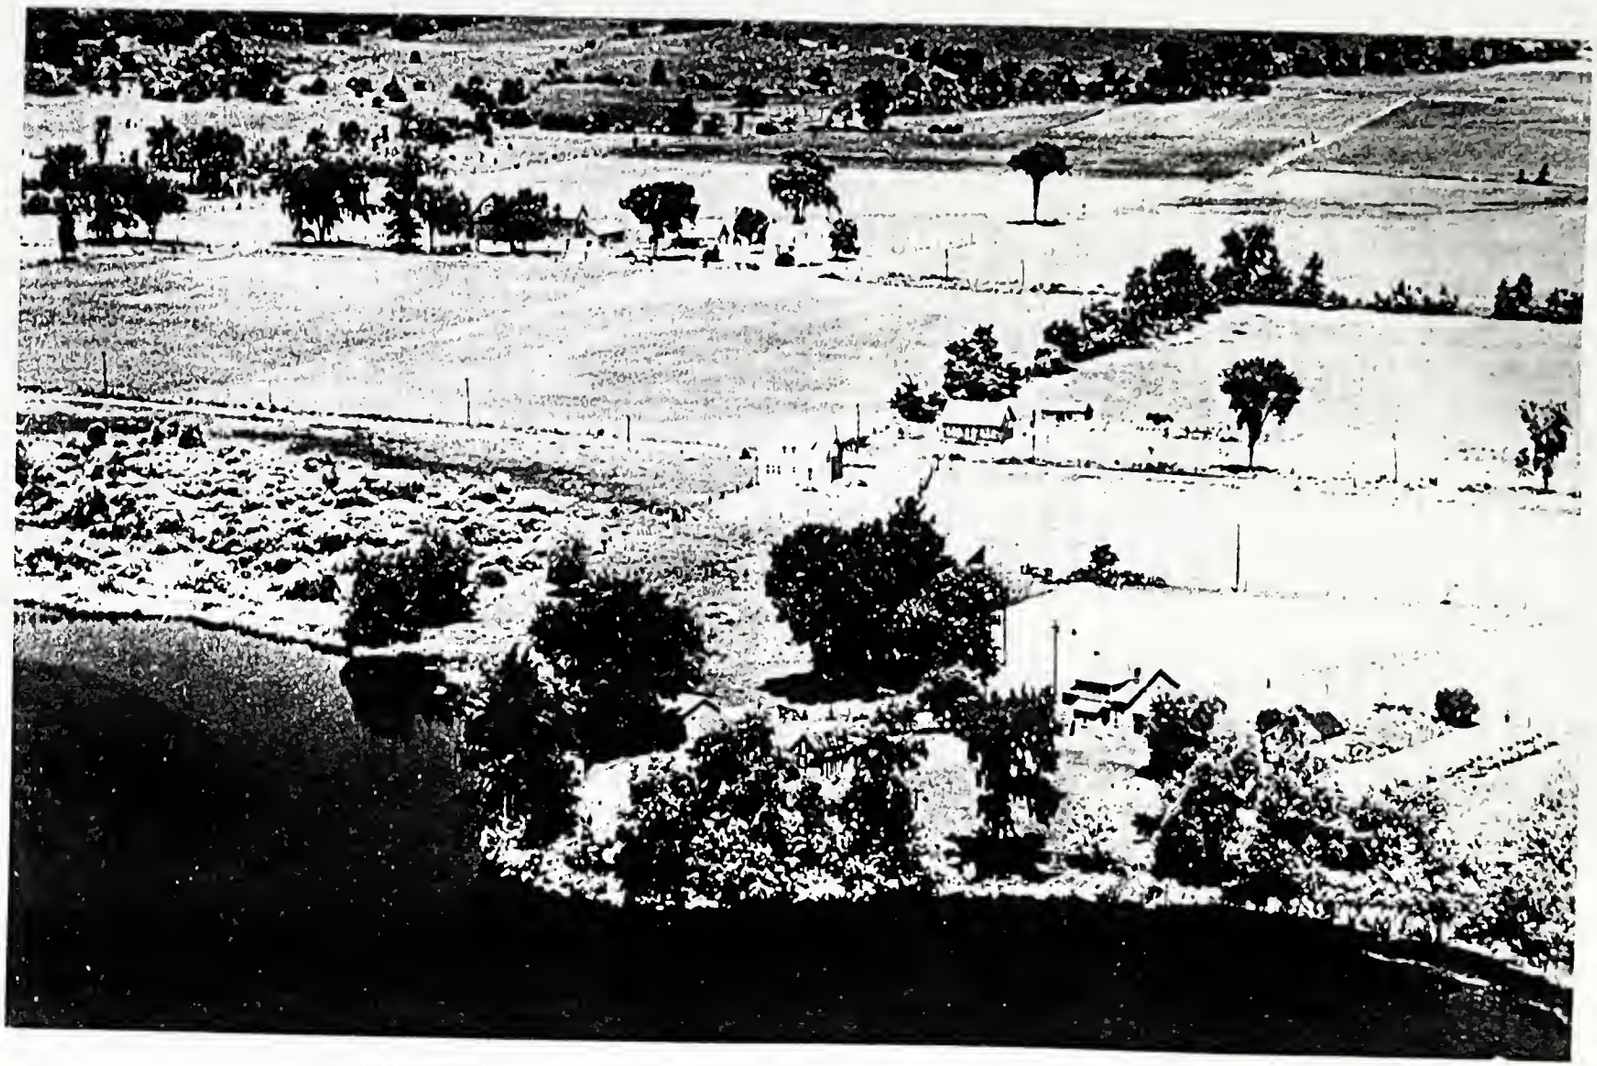
Where do I definitely document the name Rosier? If you missed that antecedent to our present gropings, you will find it in PART II, in the last paragraph of Bibliography Item 1 referring to Book III of Church Records of the Rev. John Langhorn, Fredericksburgh, Ontario wherein it reads, "George, son of Solomon and Hannah Rosier, baptized May 17, 1795." Samuel and Huldah Rosier are recorded there also. This is the American pier of the bridge to France.

How the Rosiers got to America I cannot answer. I do not find any passenger lists of hundreds extant, to show how or when they arrived. John Rosier (Item 88) on voyages with Gosnold and Weymouth in 1602 and 1605 to the coast of Maine (Pequamid), was an explorer not a settler. It isn't likely that the Rosiers in fleeing France, went to Canada which until 1763, was French. Yes, we looked for de Rosier too.

But as stated on page 21 under the heading Change of Surnames, Nova Scotia was a haven for French Protestants because after the Treaty of Utrecht in 1713, it became permanently a British colony. Under favorable winds, a days sailing of 24 hours would bring a ship into Casco Bay (Portland, Maine) or even Boston harbor.

Due to the lack of other information of record, this seems the most likely route and means of entry for the Rosiers. I must say however, that the Nova Scotia Historical Society has no record of passenger lists of those days. Upon its suggestion, I tried the Essex Institute at Salem, Massachusetts. Likewise it was unable to throw any light upon the problem and so referred me to a professional genealogist of Boston. Even with this added scrutiny no record was found. Probably no passenger manifests were kept in this coastwise traffic because of the short distance and the character of the boats thus involved.

In all this hunt for names, one thing is puzzling. The name Rosier, Rouziere and so on, seems to go a long way back without the de. Yet independently, this Michigan reference (Item 170) of 1904 pops up with a De Rosa. That de seems definite and persistent even though the family, after it moved from New England westward and to Canada, split in two directions from Ontario—one branch going to New York and another to Michigan.



A Historic Spot—point on the Trent River, Ontario, where the Rosebush family from New York State landed in 1794-95.
This land is owned and occupied by Ernest Rosebush.

The Family in America

At Southold, Long Island, the community through an agreement by the first settlers, owned or claimed all the land in or about the town. Late comers had to bargain for land and as values stood in those days in the new world, they probably thought the prices high. But some stopped anyway to check prospects or to enable the man of the family to look elsewhere because transportation was difficult and sometimes hazardous.

In 1698, William and Ann Rosebash appeared in Southold seeking land and a home. How long they were there is a guess. For they simply vanish from the record. They were not there in 1683 and they appear in no record (p 22) after 1698. Were they from New England provinces or did they go there from Southold? Were they the descendants of Rosiers? Or did they revert to that name in New England and become our ancestors? It would be interesting if they could break the silence of 255 years to tell us how they came to use that name at such an early date and then vanish without any trace we can discover.

If we look for the name Rosebush in New England prior to the Revolutionary War, we don't find it. But thirty-three years after William and Ann appear in Southold, we find that Robert Rozer marries Agnes Manwarren in Boston. Two years later, January 1733, Mary Rosier is recorded as the wife of Elisha Chase of Swansea (Item 89h); three years later Mary Rosier marries Nathaniel Staples or Stephens of Taunton (Item 105). In January 1739, Elizabeth Rosher marries Philip Harvey of Taunton; in June, Agnes Rosher "intends" T. Crouchington of Boston and in March 1752, John Rosher and Sibbel Cobb of Taunton publish their intentions. Then in 1754, Robert Rozier and Mary Shevally (Chevalier?) of Concord, marry (Item 114). Five years later, June 5, 1759, our Joseph marries Hannah Hart. On January 29, 1778, Joseph Rosier marries Dorcas Cutler in Hubbardston, Mass. (Item 105). A third Robert Rozier is on the "List of Alarm Men" in Rutland, Massachusetts, at the start of the war in 1775. In 1783 Eleazer Ball III married Lucy Rozier (Item 136),—and thus Lucy Ball made her first appearance in "I Love Lucy."

A study of Joseph's family chart and probable years of marriage of the children where we have to guess, indicates that the family was born at regular intervals from about 1764 to about 1772, covering the first six in the following order: Catherine (Item 121-1), Samuel, Solomon, Fanny, Nancy and Polly. Then (if we take the Land Office statement), Lewis was born in 1777. Following him, there is nothing as to the birthdates of Olive and William, but Joseph, Jr. was not born until May, 1789. This of course brings in the question of a second wife. Hannah Hart could have died early in 1777 and Joseph thereupon married Dorcas Cutler, January 29, 1778. Of course the Joseph in Item 105 may be another Joseph. Yet this Joseph is of Hubbardston and I have a suspicion that our Joseph was also.

On the other hand there is Philo White who wrote in 1886 the only story we have of Joseph and his family of ten. Philo was a relative through Joseph's daughter Catherine. He was born in 1809, knew those he wrote about personally, was a Civil Engineer conducting land surveys and thus seems a competent authority. He mentions only Hannah Hart. If Dorcas Cutler was the mother of Olive, William and Joseph, Jr., it seems rather odd he would not know it and say so. Of course there is Hannah Hart of Farmington (Item 95a). Like Ruth Hubbard she could have married at fifteen. So by elimination do we settle on Hannah the daughter of Jeames Hart of Farmington?

By 1763, four years after Joseph married Hannah, French Canada was acquired by Great Britain which at that time included the American Colonies south of the St. Lawrence River. Following the peace, more land seekers came from the east to the upper Hudson and to the Mohawk valley. Twelve years later found England and her American Colonies in a war which lasted eight years.

In addition to the early marriages listed above, there were a number of Rosiers (various spelling,—Items 105, 108, 109, 115) who served with Massachusetts regiments in the Revolution, some serving during most of the war. There were two Peters; one from Boston who was said to have died in New Jersey in 1779—no definite record, the other from Scituate who enlisted for three years and was "reported a foreigner" (Item 109). Charles from Hubbardston or Rutland, presumably was in the Battle of Bennington. He was called out again to stop Burgoyne and served until after Burgoyne surrendered. The next Spring (1778) he was called to help guard Burgoyne's captured army, diplomatically called the "Troops of the Convention," at Cambridge and served then a little over three months. In 1783 he married Mary Smith of Holden, Massachusetts and had children.

John of Rutland served in 1775 and perhaps at Ticonderoga in 1776. He was probably in the Battle of Bennington, August 16, 1777. In February, 1778 he enlisted for the duration of the war, had a long and good record becoming Corporal in Colonel's Company and was discharged in 1780. (However, Pennsylvania Archives show that a John Rosier of "The Line" received pay for period 1778-1783.) John Roser and Patience Green married April 17, 1783 (Item 130b). He was a pensioner in 1840 in Belvidere, Vermont, being then about 86 years old.

"Jos'h" Rozer was from Hubbardston. The record shows he was called out for twenty days but had to serve only eleven days, July, 1778 (Item 109).

For all these people we have to guess at the family relationships. Therefore let us set them down in order—

V.R. of—	Year	Marriages or "Intentions" to marry	Former Abode
Boston	1731	Robert and Agnes publish intentions	Boston
Hubbardston	1736	Mary marries Nathaniel Staples	Taunton
"	1739	Elizabeth marries Philip Harvey	"
Boston	1739	Agnes and T. Crouchington intend	Boston
Hubbardston	1752	John and Sibbel Cobb publish intentions	Taunton
Concord	1754	Robert marries Mary Shevally (Chevalier?)	Concord
	1759	Joseph marries Hannah Hart (but not in Vital Records of Mass. or Conn.)

The group from 1731 to 1740 could be one generation and the group 1752-1759 another. Since there is only one man in the first group, he could be the father of the second especially since another Robert appears in 1754. The first Robert could be a brother of the Abraham born in London, mentioned in the preceding section. And the London Abraham could be the father of some of these two groups. There was an Abraham in America who served in the Revolution in New Jersey (Item 117). Even more likely, he could be the son of the London Abraham. Probably also there are several more Rosiers we have not found.

While Robert might have been born on "De Rosa" street in Paris, it would seem more likely that it was Abraham's father John and wife Susanne who were born there although this would set back the statement in the Bay County History (Item 170) one generation. Note particularly however, that the name Robert is not to be found among the early Rosiers of New York and Ontario,—a good reason for thinking he was not Joseph's father. But Abraham would be likely to give his sons Biblical names.

Except for Peter the Revolutionary War soldier "reported a foreigner," William and Ann Rosebush of Southold could be considered as ancestors. If Peter's parents had been in America since 1698, he would be anything but a foreigner. So from the general situation, I am inclined to think that William and Ann are a separate puzzle.

Let us add to these groups all others who served in the Revolution. Probably they were born within ten years each way of 1750. They are: the two Peters, Charles, a third Robert if he is the son of the Robert of 1754 (Concord), the "Jos'h" of Hubbardston and perhaps two Johns. It doesn't change the picture much except to add more future heads of families and show a possible continuation of the name Robert. The two groups Rutland-Hubbardston and Boston-Scituate-Taunton were about 35 miles apart by road. The Taunton items are covered by Hubbardston Vital Records, not Taunton, so the two groups were closely related. Hannah Hart of Farmington, Conn. was about 65 miles distant from Rutland.

Robert Rosier who married Mary Shevally in Concord where they both lived and the two Peters of Boston and Scituate, may have had some other occupation than farming, but those living on the headwaters of the Ware river in Rutland and Hubbardston, were probably all farmers.

But according to the records of Worcester and Middlesex counties, there isn't a Deed to land or a Will by a Rosier to be found in either county. Neither the Barbour Papers in the Connecticut

State Library nor the extensive card index there of personnel, list the name Rosier or Rosebush for the years prior to the Revolution. The U.S. Census of 1790, in addition to others already named, shows Nathan Rosier and family in Bennington, Vermont, Malachi Roser with no family indicated, in Branford, Connecticut and David Rosier with a family (no boys) in Watertown, Litchfield County, Connecticut.

As to "Jos'h" Rozer of Hubbardston, I have thought the abbreviation was for Josiah. The usual abbreviation for Joseph of course is "Jos." but some of the Colonial company clerks were not too good at such things. So this "Jos'h" could be in reality, Joseph Rosier the same man who married Dorcas Cutler in January, 1778.

In the Hastings County Registrar's Office, Belleville, Ontario, there is a Deed recorded, carrying date of 28 June, 1809 (p 162) wherein it states (he was 70 then), "Joseph Rosebush . . . . . and Deborah his wife . . . . . Grantors" and so on. This is proof that Joseph had a wife after his first wife Hannah Hart and due to his age, this Deborah could have been his third wife. Nothing more is known of Deborah.

Philo White's story of 1886 mentioned above, was probably the first of a series he had in mind but did not continue. Hence he mentioned only Hannah Hart. On the other hand he mentioned only Huldah Clark as the wife of Samuel Rosebush, whereas the story by Harry Bettys in the News-Argus of 1904 (Appen. II—Settlement of Rawdon) and the Will of Joseph Bettys, Sr. (Appen. IV—Surrogate's Records, Saratoga Co., N.Y.), is clear evidence that Samuel married Huldah Bettys before he married Huldah Clark. At any rate, Philo White did not mention all the wives in that initial story. Therefore Joseph could have married Dorcas Cutler in January, 1778 and Deborah ———— about 1795.

Dr. Harry W. Mack has a journal of family records compiled by his father, Rev. Henry W. Mack. This journal contains stories of early times as told by ancestors in the Chard, Sine and Mack families. (See Genealogy of those families by Dr. Mack). One statement was that Joseph Rosebush swam the St. Lawrence River at night and under a floating log, in order to escape capture by provincial troops of New York. Also it said that Joseph was away from home much of the time during the war.

By 1780, Joseph was about 42 years old and had a family of seven children by his first wife Hannah Hart, none of whom were old enough for military service.

To the "Old List" of United Empire Loyalists (p 138) a Joseph *H*osier was added by order of the Executive Council. Since Hosier could easily be mis-written for Rosier, I checked with Canadian Archives at Ottawa to get more information about this Joseph *H*osier. Mr. William Kaye Lamb, Dominion Archivist, advised that Joseph Hosier was a laborer from the Province of New York and attached a Muster Roll extract showing that he belonged to Jessup's Corps in which he served seven months. The Muster Roll Return which was dated 1 January, 1783, gave his age as 23 years which definitely sets him apart from our Joseph some twenty-odd years. Hence there is yet no documentary evidence showing that our Joseph served the British in the Revolution.

As to swimming the St. Lawrence, this incident must have occurred after Joseph moved to Ballston, otherwise the Chard or Sine people would not have known about it. The Chards were French too and favored the Colonies. This being so, they may have suspected Joseph of being favorable to the British and interpreted his absences accordingly.

For political reasons, the French along the upper Hudson, had considerable freedom to visit the French towns on the St. Lawrence, often being used as emissaries, interpreters while engaging in trade (Item 134a, b, c, d). Due to the recent conquest of French Canada by the British, the French were considered largely in sympathy with the rebelling Colonies, but if living in the Colonies and claiming neutrality, usually were not pressed. On the other hand, some Huguenots who had fled to England from persecution in France, still were grateful for the sympathy, freedom and financial aid they had received from the English.

The Revolutionary War was practically ended when Cornwallis surrendered in October 1781. So Joseph's historic swim across the St. Lawrence, must have taken place before 1782. If he were the same Joseph Rosier of Hubbardston, who married Dorcas Cutler in January and served at Rutland Barracks in July of 1778, it is unlikely he moved to Ballston before 1779. That move would be the time when he changed the family name from Rosier to Rosebush.

In 1785 Joseph and family were living on a farm about 1½ miles southwest of Ballston in the so-called "Five Thousand Acre Tract," being Lot 22 thereof containing 267 acres. He evidently owned this farm in fee-simple judging by the Deed he later gave to Barnabas Hartley.

But every effort to locate the Deed to him as Grantee has failed. For many months a hunt has been made for it successively by a professional genealogist, by a lawyer, by a county historian and by county clerks because it is a paper which would probably show Joseph's former habitat, surname used, possibly the name of his wife at that time and indicate the year he moved to Ballston. However in Appendix IV there is included a Deed to Schermerhorn and Glen which with other papers there, shows the general situation surrounding land grants and chains of title in the Kayaderosseras Patent. (See also Map pp 166-7)

Thus we assume that Joseph came to Ballston from Hubbardston with his second wife Dorcas Cutler in 1779 or 1780. He acquired there a farm of 267 acres. His oldest child Catherine married at the family home June 8, 1785, Barce Chard. And Barce appears in the first U.S. Census, 1790, at Caughnawaga on the Mohawk River, with his wife and three girls.

On December 15, 1789, Joseph sold his Ballston farm for 333 pounds, 15 shillings to Barnabas Hartley.* Joseph must have moved away soon after, because neither he nor his family appear in the U.S. Census of 1790 for New York State. There is no more about him in the records until January, 1794 when Peter, Solomon and Joseph petition for land at Adolphustown, Lennox and Addington Counties, Ontario.

One may well guess that during the intervening four years he prospected westward along the Mohawk Valley and on to Lake Ontario looking for a good place to settle. Perhaps he did settle somewhere temporarily. But in moving along, he probably had all his household possessions on a bateau or scow pulled by horses, the family living aboard or camping along the river. The cattle were driven along the trail by the boys of the family. Joseph may have stopped in Caughnawaga for a visit with the growing family of his son-in-law Barce Chard. He may have seen the Curtis family in Deerfield township, Oneida County. And thence presumably he made his way, still westward, across Oneida lake and down the Oswego river to Lake Ontario.

* See Appendix IV for the Deed in full and the story of the Kayaderosseras Patent Claims; also Reminiscences of Saratoga and Ballston by William L. Stone, New York, 1875. Joseph's Deed is to be found in Saratoga County Register's Office, Ballston Spa, N. Y.; Book of Deeds A, page 187.

Somewhere during the latter part of this trek, he heard of the new Canadian Act of 1792 under which 200 acres of land could be granted to anyone who could qualify as a bona fide settler. So the journey was continued along the eastern shore of Lake Ontario, past Sackets Harbor to Cape Vincent and finally to the sheltered crossing of the St. Lawrence River at Thousand Islands. Across the river, he turned westward to Kingston and to the Bay of Quinte. It now being winter, he could proceed with less work on solid ice up the bays and rivers. From what has been said before, the St. Lawrence waterway may not have been entirely new to Joseph.

This route for the journey of Joseph and his family is of course suppositious. Thousands made the trip to Ontario this way because so many thought the rapids and the carrying places easier to cross than the route by Lake Champlain, Richelieu River and up the St. Lawrence. For those south of the lake it was much shorter too. It is a guess also, whether the family made the trip before or after the petitions were filed for land.

In January and February 1794, Peter 268, Solomon 289 and Joseph 423, petitioned for 200 acres of land each. Because these petitions were not all filed at the same time, it seems reasonable to think the families came later that year, arriving probably in the winter of 1794-5. The number after each name above, indicates the petition and probably the order in which the applications were made. Solomon and Joseph his father, completed their claims and received the land. But Peter's application, the first one made, is not now in Canadian Archives. The record shows he was recommended for 200 acres if none had been granted before June 26, 1797. There is no record of any further action. Very likely his application was withdrawn or dropped or perhaps he died. It is noticeable however, that only one descendant of Joseph was named Peter and he in the fourth generation after Joseph.

The great majority of land grants in the Bay of Quinte area and north in Ontario, had been made to United Empire Loyalists, men who had fought for or strongly supported the King in the recent struggle. Did Peter withdraw and go back to the States when he became aware of it or was he advised to do so? If so, why—why Peter and not Joseph. Could this Peter be Peter Rosier or Rosway (Item 109) of the Massachusetts Line, artillery-man—loader, gunwiper, "reported a foreigner?" There is no record of Joseph having taken part ever

OFFICE OF THE ADJUTANT GENERAL
WASHINGTON 25, D. C.

IN REPLY REFER TO
AGAW/OY/dlw

17 June 1953

Mr. W. E. Rosebush,
411 East Washington Street,
Appleton, Wisconsin

Dear Mr. Rosebush:

This is in reply to your letter dated 18 May 1953, herewith returned.

The records show that one Peter Rosier, name not found as Rosway, served in the Revolutionary War as a Matross in Captain Winthrop Sargent's Company, 3rd Artillery Regiment, Continental Troops, commanded by Colonel John Crane. He enlisted 28 March 1778 for three years, and his name appears on a company muster roll dated North Castle, 23 July 1778, which shows him sick in Jerseys. His name last appears on a company pay roll for October 1778 which shows that he received 8 30/90 dollars for one months service.

The records covering the above mentioned period are of a strictly military character, rarely showing any personal or family history, and in the case of the above named man nothing has been found concerning his next of kin.

The Army's collection of Revolutionary War records is incomplete and it is possible that some additional information may be obtained from the Secretary of the Commonwealth, Boston, Massachusetts.

Sincerely yours,

Wm E. Bergin

in the fighting on the side of the Colonies. In Solomon's family the story was told that "two brothers came to Canada. One went to New England and was never heard from after." Could this be Peter? Indeed it might be; and thus that legend would be satisfied.

Anyway the family had arrived—on ice. They landed on a point of land jutting from the east bank of the Trent River where it bends westwardly toward Glen Ross. They spent the winter there and with the coming of Spring, spread out over the country, some up Rawdon or Salmon creek to what became later known as Seldon's Mills, then Rawdon, then Stirling which as such was incorporated in 1858. Some went north toward Marmora, some to Hungerford, some south to the vicinity of the present town of Frankford. Afterward some also took land in the country north of Glen Ross, now Rawdon township.

Evidently they settled on the land before securing title to it because in many instances at that time, the requirements were that they had to prove their ability to become qualified settlers before the land grant became final. So it was for some, that the title did not actually pass to them until three or four years after they filed the initial petition. (See Item 137) In Appendix IV will be found many extracts from County Records showing the details of various legal grants and deeds to land on the trails of different families.

The first winter was hard of course. They put up shelters and cabins under severe weather conditions. But the forest gave some protection against the direct blasts of winter. The family, being pioneers, was hardy, used to rough weather and the cold; and like all frontiersmen, experts with axe and saw and splitting maul. It is said that Joseph knew something of the making of lumber and timber products such as wood staves, bolts and the wood parts of farm utensils and implements. Solomon his son was called a cooper. So while some of the family's temporary shelter was in the form probably of wakiups and blanket windbreaks, it would not take long for father and sons to erect small cabins with fireplaces, in which the family could find fair comfort.

The cows and other animals were browsed on brush along the watercourses and gullies. Also quantities of twigs and sprouts were cut and brought to them. Salt fish was also a part of their diet not only for the salt but for added nutriment. Except for the grain and dried provender brought with them, the food for that first winter, had to come out of the river which was alive with white fish and salmon and from the forests which provided rabbits, deer and bears. So fish and game were then, as for pioneers two hundred years before them in America, the mainstay of the family's existence.

Not long after the family settled itself on the various farm sites selected, other settlers came year by year until there was a need and a demand for some community organization toward roads, fences, churches and schools. In 1798 Paul Gruber and Joseph Rosebush were appointed as the first Wardens. The first church organization in the area was formed June 6, 1806 at the home of Samuel Rosebush, Lot 18, Concession 2, township of Rawdon. This lot actually was owned by Joseph the father who deeded part of it in 1821 to his son Lewis and the other portion to his son William in 1822. Samuel as the eldest son, probably was Joseph's farm manager.

Most of the Rosebush boys were good mechanics and carpenters and thus had a hand in local construction. About 1820, Joseph the father, "The Frenchman," may have instigated the building of the first saw and grist mills in Rawdon. But Harry Bettys is the authority in stating that Samuel Rosebush was the actual builder. This enterprise was located close to the site of the present dam on Rawdon Creek in Stirling. The story of Harry Bettys will be found in Appendix II, Settlement of Rawdon.

The source of the name "Selden's Mills" no one knows today. Some have thought it a distortion from Sheldon. I found the name with an odd relationship which probably has no bearing at all,—"Mary Selden of Lyn's Inn, Middlesex" (England), married in 1667, Edward Rosier (Item 114).

Dr. Harry W. Mack of Detroit is authority for the story that Caleb Gilbert and John (Colonel, Squire) Bleeker were allotted Lot 11, Concession 1 of Rawdon provided they erected a mill thereon inside of two years. Crown Deeds were to be given later. Then it appears that Capt. John W. Meyers entered into the same deal. He had been six and one half years in the British service in the Revolution and therefore was U.E.L. the same as Colonel Bleeker (Bleecker) although the latter does not appear on the "Old U.E.L. List." Capt. Meyers had been a farmer in the Province of New York before the war and lost all his property there by confiscation. He served in Jessup's Corps. But this wasn't all. Colonel Bleeker had married Catherine and Mary (the latter prior to 1794) both daughters of Capt. Meyers who lived in Belleville then called Meyer's Creek. So here was a family alliance as well as one of business. Colonel Bleeker however died in 1807. So the Meyers family is said to have entered upon the land of Joseph Rosebush in the 2nd Concession of Rawdon for the purpose of carrying out the milling enterprise. But there is no evidence of it on the records and no water for it upon that land. Joseph owned Lot 9, Concession 1. Anyway, by that time it looks as if the two year limit for building the mill in order to get a grant to the millsite, had expired.

The original frame mill burned in 1845 and the stone mill replacing it, built that same year by Mr. Fidlar, the first Warden of Hastings County, appears to be the one still in use today for other purposes. Mr. Fidlar's mill was four stories high and 50x72 feet in area. In 1886 Mrs. McDougal was the owner and the Stirling NEWS-ARGUS in July of that year, said that Samuel Rosebush first settled near the millsite.

"In 1822 a small migration of settlers from Stirling, Scotland, occurred, resulting in a settlement of the same name north of Belleville." (16th Report, Dep't of Archives, Ontario). But the aforesaid result was years in coming, for the settlement was called Rawdon long after. In 1832 there were only five houses in the hamlet and it was 1858 before the town was incorporated as Stirling.

Including his Crown Grants and private purchases plus the Crown Grants and leases to his sons, in the early years of the 19th Century Joseph owned or controlled over 1500 acres of land in the Midland District which from 1792 to 1839 covered the area between Gananoque and Trenton. But it took only a few generations of dividing among children, and sales by descendants moving to newer country, to cause this land tenure to disappear into divers fractions. However, some is still held under the name Rosebush to this day, 160 years later, including the original point of landing.

Some of the land was "logged off" and sold as "stump ranches" or "cutover land." By this time there were a number of mills. The Directory of Hastings County for 1860-61 has the following:

Stirling—It has one of the finest flour mills in the country; a substantial stone building four stories high and 50 x 72 feet.

The saw and grist mills not only saved the long journey to Kingston principally for flour, which the earliest settlers took as a matter of course, but more than that, helped tremendously to build up the country. Flour and lumber were not only commodities needed by the settlers but both were exportable for cash. This money helped trade immensely quite in contrast to earlier systems of barter.

The Civil War in the United States started in 1861 and so for several years, there was a steady and very lucrative market for nearly everything which could be grown or manufactured. Stirling saw then perhaps its most prosperous days and greatest growth. The country was fertile, forests were handy and logging cheap, waterways were ample for log-drives and there was a comparatively smooth water highway to a voracious market at good prices.

After the building of the first mills in 1820 and on up to the end of the Civil War in the United States, most of the Rosebush boys added to their own family comforts by building new frame houses in place of the log cabins so common in early days—in fact the only type of structure. Lewis built a big house at the westward bend of the Trent River. The boards were almost as wide as the logs were thick—some of them 30 inches. The framing was done with mortised joints and auger holes through which hardwood pins bound the whole together as tight as a drum. For the smaller work and interior finish, wrought iron spikes and nails were used, some being hand forged. There was a ball room and a fireplace reaching from floor to ceiling and wide enough for a six foot log. It became sort of a wayside inn and gathering place for sociables. There was a nearby blacksmith shop too; so horses could be shod while waiting people sat inside and gossiped or talked on political or other current topics. When Lewis Smith Rosebush, a son, married in 1841, he built another house for himself nearby. In this house a fourth generation was born. Later it was moved over and added to the "big house" the original home.

This is the place too where Nancy Fetterly came with a bevy of young folks to get a boat. Lewis Smith's mother Lancy was attracted to young Nancy and finding that she could spin, hired her on the spot to do some work for her. So it was that young Lewis and Nancy met, fell in love and married.

About the time of the McKenzie Rebellion in 1837-8, good farming land was pretty thoroughly occupied and lumber had taken the timber off the nearby flat lands where crops were now growing. The large increase in families and constant subdivision of early farms, caused many young people to look further afield. So with that and the threat of being impressed for military service in a local rebellion which many did not sympathize with, the result was that many of the younger people moved away steadily and with increasing momentum. Some went to the new lands in southwestern New York State, others to the hinterlands of northern Ontario even though no farther than Burleigh and Chandos. Still others went westward along Lake Ontario and on into Michigan. And a little later, the migration continued to Minnesota, to Manitoba, to Iowa, to Nebraska and further west.

The Rosebush families in Canada were farmers, lumbermen, mill men, carpenters or woodworkers and mechanics. Yet if we judge the early family pattern by what we found in the records, some at least spent a considerable amount of time in the past 400 years in larger towns or cities. This means there must have been merchants, traders and craftsmen among them also.

However, original traits are altered considerably not only by marriage but also by the activities and opportunities of the times we live in. Some people are naturally alert to these things and especially to changes. Others are not; they prefer the old ways, manners, customs. It all depends upon what people see in life—what they contribute to its improvement, its goodness and what they expect from it.

PERSONAL CHARACTERISTICS

At this late hour and considering the generations of marriages with other families, it may seem quaint to raise the question. But there were a lot of early family intermarriages in America at least and some traits seem apparent. Red hair is one. It crops out sporadically in Ontario as it has elsewhere. My father once opined our red hair came from the Perkins clan. It could come from the Stewards too; and some Burdicks have sandy to reddish hair. Of course all these families originated in Western Europe or the British Isles—half and half.

Most of the Ontario Rosebushes today seem of medium height and of dark complexion. But two, more than ten years apart in one family, have red hair. Like most of those noted elsewhere they are musical, goodnatured but philosophical. Those in Michigan are larger in frame and a bit rounder in face but there are some striking similarities. One locality in the United States relates that Rosebush people are clannish, somewhat reserved; a few being downright reticent—even secretive. It may be again the old idea of making friends slowly but surely.

However, of all the hundreds of letters sent out, only a very few of those known to be living, failed to answer. Therefore I would add that they are a courteous, chivalrous tribe.

Freckles are a Perkins legacy. There was one clan of the Perkins family called colloquially "Trout" Perkinses because of the large "speckled trout freckles" which adorned their browned arms in the summertime.

In size and stature the tribe varies naturally from smallish, thin-waisted, thin-faced types to tall, thick-chested, broad shouldered, round-faced folk made for heavy work but on the contrary so often found these days holding down sedentary jobs. Grandfather Rosebush and his immediate family had high cheek bones and long noses; rather large eye sockets with atavistic bumps above. Family traits breed in and out just as in other species of the animal kingdom. So it would seem that in "America the Melting Pot," we have been fairly melted and mixed.

OTHER QUESTIONS AND SOME ANSWERS

Names

The transition from French to English caused many variations in spelling. Much of this was due to differences in pronunciation. But that was not all. The wars and migrations of those times often made it impossible to properly learn to read and write one's own language.

As noted earlier, there had always been wonderment in our immediate family as to the use in Canada of the names R'Bush and Bush for Rosebush. Reproductions herein of a family Bible record and of the original land-grant petition signed by Solomon Rose Bush, indicate the reason. The translation of Rosier meant two English words to these people—Rose Bush. To their neighbors, Rose was simply a middle name. Then it was abbreviated by writing R'Bush. Some used simply the name Bush. But this last had complications later when a family arrived with Bush its original name.

Evidently since leaving France the Rosiers had difficulty with the family name. There was always the difference in pronunciation and consequent spelling. Even Anglicized to Rosebush, it continues to cause hesitation to this day. People who hear it for the first time can not seem to connect it with its botanical prototype but instead would write it Rosebuch, Roseback, Rosebosch or other variations. And I learned recently that in the Bronx, New York City, names had been changed from Rosenbaum and Rosenbusch to Rosebush which for a family lineage, further confuses.

Nicknames too are confusing. Instances are frequent where the original name has been entirely forgotten through life-long use of the nickname. In other instances, the nickname actually was the original given-name.

The dignified and stately name of Elizabeth has been altered to Beth, Betty, Betsy, Bessie, Liz, Lizzie, Libby, Lisabeth and perhaps other variants. Sarah has veered to Sadie and even Sate. Annette, Antoinette and Jeanette become Nettie or Jennie; Florence becomes Flossie; Mary for no reason at all becomes Polly. But one of the oddest is "Bass" for William Tobias whom people first called Bill or Bias. Finally the two nicknames were combined into Bass which stuck so fast for a lifetime as to become almost official.

One day about forty years ago, a new salesman came to the office where I was employed. He introduced himself, named his company which was old and well known, yet when I gave him my name, Rosebush, he seemed confused. He did not ask me to repeat it and left soon after. Some months later after a few visits had made him better acquainted, he said to me one day. "Do you remember my first visit here?" I said I recalled it. "Yes, but do you remember how embarrassed I must have looked when you gave me your name?" No, I said I didn't recall that. "Well, I married her last week but at the time I first saw you, I hadn't been able to win her and my friends were razzing me to pieces. I thought someone had tipped you off that I would be coming here. Her name is or was Rose Bush." (See Item 112 for a real ancient tale on the name.)

Loose Links

There are a number of these, some of which have more or less logically been arbitrarily hitched on to existing branches of the family as "not proven" connections. Some we can not find sufficient reasons for handling in this way. One is Libbie Rosebush who married in 1888, Albert D. Palmer, son of Charles L. Palmer (#2824, Chesebrough Genealogy, 1903) who was born June 27, 1815. She died August 8, 1890. Another is Isaac R.Bush (R'Bush?) who married Alzina Helen Wescott, November 14, 1869. A third is Emaline Rosebush, 29, born in Canada, Ballston, N.Y. Census of 1870 —with George, age 7 and Fred, age 4.

There are also a few families named Desrosiers or Des Rosieres with descendants who changed the name to Rosebush between 1850 and 1900. What is the origin of this plural form? Dionne says (p. 21 this book) that it is a parish near Saumur in the Province of Maine-et-Loire; so it is likely these families originated there. Saumur is southwest of Paris and about half way between Paris and Derosier in Correze.

Probably three Desrosiers families came to the United States from Yamaska, P.Q., Canada between 1850 and 1870. Three Union soldiers of the Civil War, unidentified with any Rosebush family, are listed with these families as will be seen below.

In running down the war service of George Finkle (Fingle) who was in the 80th Foot a "regular" British regiment, in a rare book in the Library of Congress (Item 111), I found that this regiment was among the forces capturing Montreal in September 1760. I also found among the French who surrendered, the 2nd Bn. de la Reine, 2nd Bn. de la Sarre, 2nd and 3rd Bns. of Berry and the 2nd Bn. of Royal Rousillons, Languedoc, Gouienne and Bearn—these last being southern French provinces. But the old Province of Berry almost touching the city of Orleans, is only fifty miles from Saumur. It is quite possible that the Desrosiers who came from Yamaska, P.Q. as above, actually arrived on American soil with these regular French troops. And it is not at all unlikely that five hundred years ago these families were all de Rosier in southern France. One might well note that in Yamaska even, the name is recorded as Desrosier. Their lineage tables are next below.

Due to fire which destroyed early church records and the lapse of time, it has been impossible to definitely tie together the three following branches of the DesRosiers Family which centered at Yamaska, evidently under the spelling then of Desrosier; and from descendants who emigrated to New England states during the years 1850-1870, to accurately set up the complete lineage since then. Some of these people Anglicized the name to Rosebush and later their children reverted to the name Des Rosiers. The family connections to Yamaska origins, are partly assumptions.

I. THE FAMILY DESROSIER, YAMASKA, P.Q.; PARENTS GIVEN NAMES ARE UNKNOWN

Of the children below, Joseph was a godfather, as the above Church Register indicates and is thought to be a brother of the parent Louis named therein, while Georges is an assumed third brother set up as a tie of convenience.

II. (a) Joseph had:

III. 1. Joseph who went to Collinsville, Conn. Wives of father and son are unknown but Jos. Jr. had:
   a. Isadore, to China, age 24;
   b. Eugene, lived & d. Meriden;
   c. Oswald, lived & d. Meriden;
   d. Sevia m. ——— Stickles.

(b) Louis and wife Marguerite Bibeau had eleven children, listed below with descendants tabulated on another page—

1. Moise (Moses)
2. Emilie
3. Eno
4. Marie

(c) Georges—assumed to have gone from Yamaska to Frenchville and Madawaska, Me. Georges had:

1. George b. 1849?;
2. Jean b. 1851?;
3. Joseph b. 1853?;
4. Alexander b. 1855?.

In Collinsville, Joseph changed family name to Rosebush abt. 1890. Shortly after he moved to Meriden where he d. about 1891.

2. Louis b. in Yamaska; m. Adelaide Geroux—see below.
5. Oliver
6. Dolphis
7. Elmire
8. Elizabeth
9. Philomene
10. Louis b. June 11, 1848
11. Joseph m. Nancy Green.

The above four boys also had descendants who will be tabulated on another page.

Before tabulating the family lineages under (a), (b) and (c) above, something should be recorded about the three Civil War soldiers, all volunteers for 3 year enlistments, who cannot be identified with any New England DesRosier or Rosebush family, even with the aid of National Archives, Washington, D.C. These soldiers are:

1. Martin H. Rosebush, Pvt., Co. C. 8th Vermont Infantry. He was described as being 5 ft., 7 inches tall; light complexion, blue eyes and brown hair. He was born in Franconia, N.H. and as an 18 year old farm boy, was enlisted for three years, Dec. 10, 1861 by H. E. Foster at St. Johnsbury, Vt. and mustered in at Camp Holbrook, Brattleboro, Vt., Feb. 18, 1862. He was continuously present for duty with his company as above, until July 5, 1863. From June until November he was carried as "Absent, sick at Hospl., Baton Rouge, La., wounded June 14." In December, entry was made—"Loss, July 5, 1863, New Orleans—Died of gunshot wound in shoulder received at siege of Port Hudson." On the Muster Roll of St. Louis General Hospital, New Orleans, he is shown as having died there, July 5, 1863. No next of kin are shown anywhere, nor have they ever applied for a pension. He is buried at Chalmette National Cemetery, New Orleans, Louisiana.
2. Frederick Roser, Pvt., Co. D. 12th Maine Infantry. He is shown as having enlisted at New Orleans, May 23, 1862 for three years, age 24 years, single; no birthplace, next of kin or place of residence shown. He was mustered into service by Capt. Sturgeon from date of enrollment, on order of General Banks; was on detached service in June, 1864 (no other information as to organization or nature of duty); transferred from Co. D to Co. C, Nov. 19, 1864; transferred to 12th Maine Bn. by order of General Sheridan and mustered out at the end of his three year term, July 22, 1865, at Savannah, Georgia.
3. Fabien Desrosiers, also Derosier, Pvt., Co. E, 5th Vermont Infantry. He is shown as having been enlisted for three years by the Selectmen of Burlington, Vermont, Sept. 9, 1862, was mustered Sept. 15, 1862 and joined the above Company as a recruit, October 25, 1862 at Hagerstown, Md. He was an employee of a Marble Works probably near Burlington; age 26, height 5 ft. 6½ inches, eyes hazel, hair black. He was promoted Corporal in July 1863 and was steadily present for duty with his company until May 12, 1864 when he was killed in action at Spottsylvania, Va. Thus he was one of the 36,000 Union Soldiers, killed and wounded, who fell in the eight days of continuous fighting from the start of the Wilderness Campaign, May 4, 1864, to the day he was killed.

While these three soldiers may have come from the earlier New England family of Rosiers, yet because of the military units they joined—Vermont and Maine, northern parts—I am more inclined to think they belonged to these families below, which base on Yamaska, Quebec.

(a) With reference to generation III under (a) above, there is nothing more to add to the children of Joseph listed there. As for 2. Louis, he came in 1870 to Manchester, N.H. Soon after, he married Adelaide Geroux. Then he moved to Nashua, N.H., to East Douglas, Mass., to Cahoes and Ballston Spa, N.Y. and thence to Collinsville, Conn. where lived his brother Joseph. Adelaide Geroux died in 1911; Louis died in 1913 and both are buried in Collinsville or Canton, Conn. When his brother Joseph changed the family name to Rosebush, Louis adopted it also.

SERVICE RECORD, WORLD WAR II

For the two sons of Earl A. and Mary C. Rosebush, Iola, Kansas.

Robert W. flew a B-17 bomber in the patrol of Caribbean waters and on the west side of the Canal Zone, in the Ecuador area. He then trained for the B-29 bomber at Hays, Kansas. He flew to India with the first group to go there and crossed "The Hump" many times to China and on to Japan. He was in the first raid on Japan from this quarter. His unit was the 462nd Bomb Group known as "Hellbirds," the tails of the planes being painted red.

Kenneth E. served nineteen months in New Guinea and was then sent to the Command and Staff School at Leavenworth, Kansas for a three months course. During the nineteen months in New Guinea, he had been on ninety four combat missions including the Battle of Bismarck Sea and the raids on Rabaul, Wewak and Hollandia. As a Captain he led the attack of the four-engined bombers against Cape Gloucester, New Britain. He appeared with five other pilots in a news story group picture, over the caption "They broke Rabaul's back." His unit was the 3rd Group, 90th Sqdn. of the 5th Air Force. They flew the "Havoc" bomber. From New Guinea, he was sent later to the Philippines where he served with the 417th Bomb Group. He is now a Colonel with the U.S. Advisory Mission in Formosa.

Robert and Kenneth served all through World War II, having almost identical careers in the Air Force although in different theaters and being out of contact with each other most of the time. Both ended the war as squadron commanders and with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel.

III. †George — b. abt. 1849; went West as a young man and became a Rancher or Farmer. Used name Rosebush.

	Jean	b. abt. 1851; sometimes went by the name Desrosiers; lived in E. Millinocket, Me. In 1912-15, he moved his family to Orlando, Florida and at last report, it still lives there.
	†Joseph	b. abt. 1853; moved from northern Maine in the eighteen eighties to Wytopitlock, Me. and lived there until about 1923. He then moved to Bangor and died in nineteen thirties.

Children of George Rosebush and his unknown wife involve some guessing. Alexander above, many years ago received occasional letters from his brother George, telling about his life in the West (California). In recent years in the Los Angeles area, there is a reticent old man named George W. Rosebush who has ignored consistently all requests for information. Naturally we must respect his wishes. Nevertheless we think he is a son of the George of Generation III above and thus born about 1875. He had also a son named George W. born probably about 1900. Hence to continue, we list below:

IV.	George W. Rosebush	b. abt. 1875. He has a son:
V.	George W. Jr.	b. abt. 1900; wife named Catherine D.

OLIVER ROSEBUSH
and his wife Elizabeth Lodge of Erie, Neosho Co., Kan.

Ref. Based on files of Navy Department and U.S. Pension Bureau with additional information from his descendants.

Oliver Rosebush stated he was born July 4, 1835 at Concord, N.H. He enlisted for duty in the Mississippi Squadron of the U.S. Navy near Memphis, Tenn., November 7, 1862 and served as 3rd assistant engineer on four river steamboats, mainly the "New National." He ranked with midshipmen. He was honorably discharged February 20, 1866.

He was 5 feet 6 inches tall, of dark complexion, gray eyes and with black hair; occupation—blacksmith.

During his period of service, the Mississippi River was opened to through traffic by United States forces, the main operations being the capture of Vicksburg and Port Hudson.

Since leaving the service he resided in Evansville, Indiana until 1867 when he moved to Kansas.

On April 23, 1867 Oliver married Elizabeth Lodge at Evansville, Indiana, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. C. M. Sims, Minister of the M. E. Church. By her statement of March 18, 1912, she still retained the marriage certificate. She also stated she was 73 years old at that time which makes the year of her birth 1839.

Oliver and Elizabeth had three children:

Grace Amy	born December 22, 1868
Edmund Lodge	born October 18, 1870
Earl A.	born July 21, 1880

Well, young folks, that's the story. Our ancestors as a group seem to have been people of determined character—strong minds, strong and healthy bodies, for the most part long-lived and as educated as their pioneer times permitted. They were, like the preponderant majority of people in this country, the God-trusting, grass roots folk, the heart and core of America. They made their contribution to the ranks of the workers, the teachers, the preachers, the taxpayers—and to the battlefields wherefrom some did not return. They were interested mainly in freedom and independence; lived and died doing their daily tasks as a matter of course, like the humble robins about our homes.

Yet, as I said in the last paragraph on page 116, the de in the old name puzzled me, due to the long use of the name Rosier without the de in front of it. One day recently, I happened to notice in a large library, a book I had not seen before. It is listed under Item 143 of the Bibliography. I will say more about this in a moment.

Until our Bridge to France is more definitely established by finding how the Rosiers came to America and their given names, it may seem foolish to speculate on the history of the family in France. Yet that family seems to stand alone; the trail of circumstantial evidence for our contact with it, is not exactly trivial; thus I think what evidence we have should be included in this record. Connecting links may be found and so what we write here now, might then prove helpful.

With that in mind, I went back again to the book mentioned above. And here is the translation including the extract in Item 143:

Present Condition of French Nobility, Paris, 1883-7; from the manuscript of Ch d 'Hosier (page columns 1172-3)— Gentil de la Faye (de). First line head was Henri de G. de la Faye of Saint Yrieix of the Province of Haute Vienne (upper reaches of the Vienne River; Limoges the principal city). The second line head was Alexandre de G. de Rosier, a resigned agent or administrator of the Republic, of Rosier at the Chatenet-in-Dognon.

The family, native to St. Yrieix, possessed near that town in 1520, the fief of Jonchept; has supplied two lieutenant generals and many high officers of the house of the King. Sustained in the nobility by Daguesseau, the 12th of March, 1667. The other branches are today extinct.

Coat of Arms: A sky-blue field with a chevron of gold, together with three paddle wheels of Saint Catherine and a silver sword over all. (A copy is shown below.)

Other references— Le P. Anselme, Study of Titles; Nadaud, Nobility of Limousin (Limousin Mountains are in Haute Vienne); Supplement Saint Allais.

I might add that St. Yrieix is about thirty miles from Derosier, Egletons-Tulle in the Province of Correze. Daguesseau was "the eloquent, the indomitable" agent or attorney-general under Louis XIV.

Here at the end, it is clear that in spite of all efforts, I have succeeded only in making a bigger mystery of the Rosebush Story. But anyway, the nature of the trail is determined and some day, some one may find the answers.

What our forefathers, humble or otherwise, were or did, won't exactly determine what you are or will do. Already you are several hundred thousand ancestors away from France. But one thing is certain. All animals with good stable records for qualities of one sort or another are likely to reproduce in kind. Stability, character, determination and common sense are qualities we shall need more and more as time goes on.

Bon Voyage!

THE MERRIAM FAMILY

The Merriam Genealogy by Charles Henry Pope, Boston, 1906 including "Genealogical Memoranda" of Charles Pierce Merriam, the collection of James Sheldon Merriam, was organized and financed by a family committee. The book compiles and, believe it or not, lists by name and record, about 165 Merriams who served in the Revolution from Massachusetts and Connecticut. Merriams have served in all later wars and one was a general officer of militia. Another, a Lieutenant Colonel of the 16th Massachusetts Infantry, was wounded twice with musket balls, one passing between his jugular vein and spinal column. Finally he was instantly killed by a bullet in the head while commanding the regiment in the Battle of Spotsylvania, May 12, 1864. The family record shows many officers, professional men, bankers. One married the daughter of General Winfield S. Hancock and became a Governor of the State of Minnesota. Connecting family lineage is shown on page 121 of the Merriam Genealogy, thus:

James Johnson[7] Merriam (Jesse[6], John[5], John[4], William[3], Joseph[2], William[1]) was born June 20, 1772 at Meriden, Conn.; married at Percy, Canada, Sarah Youmans the only girl in the place. He was a blacksmith and a farmer. They died at Norham, Ontario.

SETTLEMENT OF RAWDON

The following letter appeared in the News-Argus of May 26, 1904.

Sir:

In giving a history of the first settlement of Rawdon I must give a copy of the family record of Samuel Preston Cummins. (See Lineage Table p 96)

Samuel Preston Cummins and Susan Wells were married in Bennington, Vermont (date faded); Clary Cummins born Jan. 23rd, 1790, married to Joseph Rosebush (date faded); Lucy Cummins born Feb. 2nd, 1792, married to ‡Gilead Bettys, Dec. 28, 1817; Jedediah Cummins born (date faded), married to Esther Reid, Dec. 27th, 1821; Hiram Cummins born (date faded), married to Abagail Reid, Dec. 26th, 1822, Annis Cummins, born Jan. 14th, 1800, married Joseph Green, Jan. 1st, 1817; Polly Cummins, born Mar. 31st, 1802, married Horace Phillips, July 3rd, 1823; her second husband was Samuel Horton.

My mother was Lucy Cummins. When grandfather Cummins came to Rawdon, there was one settler before them, uncle (his wife was my father's aunt), Samuel Rosebush. His father settled on what is now called the Shea (place), who was a Frenchman (and) was the first to farm (in Sidney). Uncle Samuel Rosebush took the millsite and built the first saw and grist mills in Rawdon.

Grandfather took up land north of uncle and adjoining him. Mr. Lake took land west of uncle. Mr. Green west of Mr. Lake and Mr. Weese west of Mr. Green.

My recollection from 1842 when I was nine years old, is very good. I never saw any of the first settlers except Mr. Weese. Nicholas Lake was on his father's farm. Uncle Joseph Green was on his father's farm.

*Mr. Fidlar had bought the mills and grandfather's farm about 1830. The old frame gristmill was burned down in 1845. I remember that very well. Mr. Fidlar replaced it with a stone mill. They were all summer building it. That is all that I can remember that would be of interest to your readers.

All of the children of Samuel P. Cummins were married, lived and died in Rawdon except my mother, Lucy Bettys. She died in Kansas, October 31st, 1871.

I remain yours,

Harry Bettys

Perry, Kansas, May 16th, 1904

(Reprinted in the Stirling NEWS-ARGUS, October 30, 1952.)

‡ It is not known now which of the sons of Joseph Bettys below, was the father of Gilead.
* Mr. Fidlar was the first Warden of Hastings County.

The Will of Joseph Bettys, Sr., was dated November 4, 1804; proved November 7, 1804. In it he refers probably to all of his family except some grandchildren. His "Son Joseph, deceased" after serving courageously in the New York levies, became disgruntled by a dispute and went over to the British. He led bands of Rangers on forays to his home country around Ballston, was finally captured and hung as a spy, on Capitol Hill in Albany, April 1, 1782. (See Appen. IV)

I. Barce Chard (La Chardonneret—Goldfinch) married June 8, 1785 at the home of her father Joseph, Catherine (Catta) RoseBush in Ballston Center, Saratoga Co., N.Y. They had several children of whom Chloe (below) was the third—

II. Chloe La Chard was born August 8, 1789 (probably in Caughnawaga—"town where the Christians live"—now Fonda, N.Y. on the Mohawk River); died April 15, 1872, Hastings County, Ontario. She married on March 29, 1807, William White, born 1778 in New York State. He died April 5, 1850 in Hastings County, Ontario. Both are buried in Carmel Cemetery there.

Connecting History

John White was born in Chelmsford, Essex Co., England in 1595. He and his wife Mary, with their two children, came to Boston, September 16, 1632 and were among the first settlers of Cambridge which was then called Newport. Four more children were born there to John and Mary White. The eldest son was Captain Nathaniel White. The third son of Captain Nathaniel, was Ensign Daniel White born in Middleton, Massachusetts, February 23, 1661. He had eight sons and three daughters.

Hugh White was the fifth son of Ensign Daniel and was born February 15, 1691. He had three sons and four daughters. Of these the youngest was Hon. Hugh (Judge) White (5th generation) who was the founder of "Whitestown" a large pioneer area in central New York State, immediately following the Revolution. Hon. Hugh and wife Mary had five sons and three daughters. She died in 1774.

His eldest child Rachel White married in 1776, Chancey White (no relation) a Scotsman. Chancey died in 1780 and Rachel returned to her father's home with two children, a girl three and one-half and a boy William two years old. In 1784 they all went to "Oneida Woods" which in part became "Whitestown." This boy William is the central figure in a pioneer thriller of those days. The little fellow was taken by the Indians and later returned after an adventurous captivity.

Rachel married John Allan and came to Canada in 1789 with the United Empire Loyalists. Her little daughter had died in 1788 but the boy William White came with her. They settled near what was later known as Allan School (named after John Allan) in Rawdon township, Hastings County, Ontario.

So as in II. above, William White in 1807 married Chloe La Chard. They settled at White's Eddy on the east bank of Trent River, 5th Concession, Sidney township.

William and Chloe (Chard) White had eleven children as follows:

Sweet was the sound, when oft, at evening's close,
Up yonder hill the village murmur rose;
There as I passed, with careless steps and slow,
The mingling notes came soften'd from below;
The swain responsive as the milkmaid sung,
The sober herd that low'd to meet their young;
The noisy geese that gabbled o'er the pool,
The playful children just let loose from school;
The watch-dog's voice that bay'd the whispering wind,
And the loud laugh that spoke the vacant mind;
These all in sweet confusion sought the shade,
And filled each pause the nightingale had made.

Goldsmith: Deserted Village.

Index of Places and Names

Page numbers for Family Lineage Tables will be found under Table of Contents at the front of this book. Not all places or names are included hereunder, nor is the page number given for each time mentioned but the index is adequate for ordinary reference.

Because of numerous duplication in given names, some family branches are indexed by groups, to facilitate for some, the proper location of individuals. For some of the earlier generations, dates of birth or death are given where available or probable, as an added guide. Roman numerals indicate the generation.

The Index of the Rosebush Family by branches, is followed by a complete alphabetical index covering the individuals of the entire family.
